Re: File No. 4-637, Petition to Require Public Companies to Disclose to Shareholders the Use of Corporate Resources for Political Activities

Dear Ms. Murphy:

We, the Carleton Responsible Investment Committee (CRIC), are writing today on behalf of the Investment Committee (IC) of the Board of Trustees of Carleton College, Northfield, MN, to urge the SEC to design and adopt rules requiring disclosure of corporate political spending. In particular I write in support of petition 4-637 ("to Require Public Companies to Disclose to Shareholders the Use of Corporate Resources for Political Activities").<sup>1</sup>

Petition 4-637 was submitted on August 3, 2011 by a committee of prominent law professors seeking to address the issue of corporate political spending transparency, about which many investors have increasingly become concerned in the past few years. The petition has since received a record number of comments, illustrating the extensive concern from investors, professors, and citizens alike regarding political expenditures by corporate managers using corporate assets for political purposes without disclosure to shareholders. Investor interest in political spending disclosure has grown in recent years,<sup>2</sup> as the magnitude of corporate funds flowing to politicians has increased and with it the materiality of such expenditures to investment choice.

Disclosure of information on corporate political spending is critical for the operation of corporate accountability mechanisms, including those that the Supreme Court has relied upon in its analysis of corporate political speech.<sup>3</sup> Without mandatory disclosure regulations imposed by the SEC it is not possible for shareholders to effectively monitor the use of corporate resources for political activities. Monitoring is critical to determine whether a corporation's political speech advances its long-term interests or impedes those interests, and whether the magnitude of corporate funds flowing to political causes and politicians detracts materially from earnings, adversely affects share price, or constitutes corporate waste.

As SEC Commissioner Luis Aguilar recently recognized, "It is one of the SEC's core functions to identify gaps in information that investors require, and then close that gap (sic) as quickly as possible."<sup>4</sup> It seems to us at Carleton College that requiring disclosure of corporate political spending rests squarely within the responsibility of the SEC to achieve marketplace fairness and protection of investors.

U.S. colleges and universities collectively hold approximately $400 billion in endowment investments; over a quarter of these are in publicly traded companies.<sup>5</sup> Given this enormous financial stake in public corporations, those of us responsible for the stewardship of educational institutions have a correspondingly large interest in ensuring the effective operation of corporate accountability mechanisms. Of equal or even greater importance, we also have a profound interest in ensuring that corporate funds of companies in which we are invested are not used for political expenditures inimical to our chartered purposes. Without full disclosure, this goal is impossible to achieve.

At the request of the students, faculty, trustees, and staff that comprise Carleton College, we urge the Commissioners to act swiftly in implementing the disclosure recommendations outlined in petition 4-637.

Sincerely,
