Re: FINRA Proposal to Adopt NASD Rule 2830 as FINRA Rule 2341
(SR-FINRA-2011-018)

Dear Ms. Murphy:

The Independent Directors Council¹ appreciates the opportunity to comment on the proposal by the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA) to require broker-dealers that sell investment company securities and receive cash compensation to make disclosures to investors about the cash compensation arrangements.²

IDC shares FINRA's as well as the Securities and Exchange Commission's (SEC's) commitment to promoting greater transparency of the costs and potential conflicts of interest that may arise in connection with the distribution of mutual fund shares. For this reason, IDC supports requiring FINRA members to disclose cash compensation arrangements. We are unclear, however, why the SEC and FINRA are pursuing this narrow change at this time, when broader point-of-sale initiatives that could provide more comprehensive and meaningful information to investors are underway.

² See Notice of Filing of Proposed Rule Change and Amendment No. 1 to Adopt NASD Rule 2830 as FINRA Rule 2341 (Investment Company Securities) in the Consolidated FINRA Rulebook, 76 Fed. Reg. 26779-87 (May 9, 2011).

Indeed, we understand that the SEC staff is considering recommendations to enhance the information provided at the point of sale. Section 919 of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act clarified the Commission's authority to "issue rules designating documents or information that shall be provided by a broker or dealer to a retail investor before the purchase of an investment product or service by the retail investor," and Sections 913 and 917 require the SEC to conduct studies relating to, among other things, possible new disclosure obligations of broker-dealers. Further, FINRA itself recently published a concept proposal to require its member firms to provide a written disclosure statement to retail investors at or before commencing a business relationship with them.³

We view FINRA's current proposal as only a small step toward the larger goal of providing investors with comprehensive point-of-sale disclosure and encourage the SEC and FINRA to continue their work on this broader initiative. As the SEC and FINRA proceed, it is important to bear in mind that for comprehensive point-of-sale disclosure to truly benefit mutual fund shareholders, it must, in contrast to FINRA's current proposal, extend to all investment products and services. Requiring point-of-sale disclosure only applicable to mutual fund shares would establish disincentives for broker-dealers to offer funds to their customers, which would not only disadvantage funds vis-à-vis competing products, but also harm investors trying to make informed investment decisions.
