Board of Directors

Dear Irwin,

As you know, Starboard Value LP (together with its affiliates, “Starboard”) currently has a beneficial ownership interest of approximately 10.7% of the outstanding common stock of Mellanox Technologies, Ltd. (“Mellanox” or the “Company”), making us the Company’s largest shareholder.

We are writing to express our concern about the pattern of insider selling by the current Board of Directors (the “Board”) and management team – a pattern that has continued for years and has recently intensified. While we appreciate the need and desire for company officers to sell some stock over time, the frequency and magnitude of insider selling at Mellanox is staggering and among the most one-sided we have ever seen. It raises serious questions as to both the level of commitment that the Board has to the Company and the level of confidence the Board has in management’s operating plan.

Since the Company’s IPO in 2007, there have been more than 370 sales¹ of stock by the current management team and Board, equating to approximately $130 million in proceeds. Over that period, there has been just a single open market purchase. In fact, no director or member of senior management has purchased a single share of stock in the open market since 2013. For your reference, at the end of this letter we have appended a complete list of insider sale and purchase transactions. As you can see in this list, the selling has not been limited to one or two individuals, but rather is a widespread issue among company executives and directors.

¹This figure is based on BamSEC categorizations, which generally group multiple transactions reported on a single Form 4 as a single event, even when said Form 4 includes multiple transactions. If each individual transaction were counted separately, this number would be significantly higher than 370.

Open Market Transactions since Mellanox's IPO

Source: BamSEC, Capital IQ, Company filings.

Note: Of the 373 sales, 243 were open market sales, 124 were via 10b5-1 plans, and 6 were sales or dispositions back to the issuer. Does not include purchases via the Employee Share Purchase Plan, whereby executive officers can purchase shares at 85% of the Fair Market Value of the Shares on the Enrollment Date or the Exercise Date, whichever is lower. Based on the Company's Form 4 filings, these purchases totaled approximately $600,000 of Mellanox stock, purchased at an average discount of approximately 26% to the closing price on the day of purchase.

These charts represent the aggregate results of a pattern that has been formed over more than a decade – a period during which the current management team and Board consistently and repeatedly sold stock, often at prices well below where the stock trades today.

Open Market Transactions by Year

Source: BamSEC, Company filings.

The average sale price across all 373 sales is approximately $34 per share, almost 50% below today's stock price. In fact, if the current management team and Board had simply held the stock that they were granted, let alone purchased additional stock, the aggregate value of these shares would be more than $110 million higher today. To emphasize this point, despite insiders having sold $130 million of stock, more than $110 million was left on the table.

What strikes us as most concerning is that Mellanox's pattern of insider selling has continued, and even intensified, following management's release of full year guidance in December 2017, which marked the first time Mellanox had ever given annual guidance. Since then, members of management and the Board have sold shares collectively worth more than $4.3 million in just the last 8 weeks.

Over the past two months, management has strongly and repeatedly expressed confidence about the Company's future outlook and published new financial targets for 2018 and 2019 that indicate that management expects a significant inflection point in both growth and profitability in the near future. But these statements are undermined by the repeated pattern of stock sales by the Board and key members of management and are exacerbated by management's statements on the fourth quarter conference call regarding visibility into product trends for the first quarter:

...And as we enter the quarter, we don't have too much visibility. We can be even flat in some cases. So we don't have enough information to give you visibility into what's going to go up and down.

- Eyal Waldman – Q4 2017 Earnings Call

It is certainly confusing when management states, on the one hand, that they do not have visibility into current quarter revenue trends, while, on the other hand, stating that they have a high degree of confidence in double-digit revenue growth in both 2018 and 2019. When these statements are immediately followed by a continuation of substantial insider selling, the logical conclusion is that the Company actually has very little confidence in short-, medium-, and long-term trends. It also makes us question whether the Company's 2018 and 2019 guidance reflects a detailed and well-constructed bottoms-up plan, or merely hope that growth will return.

Further, as we have discussed, shareholders have long had concerns with the level of stock-based compensation at the Company, especially given Mellanox's long-term underperformance in terms of both operating results and stock price. High stock-based compensation is not always a problem. There are benefits for tying compensation to performance and aligning insiders' interests with those of all shareholders. For high-performing, well-governed companies, high stock-based compensation is often the result of, and reward for, excellent performance and the achievement of long-term target metrics. Unfortunately this has not been the case at Mellanox. In the three years prior to our Schedule 13D filed on November 20, 2017, Mellanox had by far the lowest TSR in its peer group. Despite this underperformance, it had among the highest levels of stock-based compensation, as illustrated below.

LTM Stock-Based Compensation vs 3-Year TSR Prior to Starboard's 13D

Source: Capital IQ, Company filings. 3 Year TSR based on change in stock price, adjusted for dividends.

It would be one thing if, at the very least, management and the Board held on to the vast majority of their equity grants, in order to increase their alignment with shareholders. But the Board and management team's longstanding pattern of selling stock soon after it vests suggests management and the Board are more interested in cash payouts than the Company's stock, which brings into question the wisdom and effectiveness of Mellanox's industry-high stock-based compensation program. In fact, as you can see in the chart below, stock ownership among executives and the Board has steadily and rapidly declined since the Company's IPO. This meaningful reduction in ownership comes in spite of the Company's high stock-based compensation.

Insider Stock Ownership over Time

Source: Bloomberg, Company filings. Ownership reflects total Executive Officer and Director Ownership as of Company's annual proxy statement ("Proxy").

Note: Immediately following Mellanox's IPO, total insider ownership was 36.7% per the Company's 2007 Proxy. Primarily through insider sales in the subsequent year, insider ownership declined to 17.1% at the time of filing of the 2008 Proxy. The Company's 2011 Proxy reports 32.7% insider ownership, which appears to be an error based on including shares held by FMR LLC and Oracle Corporation, which are not Company insiders and have been excluded accordingly.

Even more striking is the dichotomy between the value of shares currently owned by non-executive directors and the proceeds they have generated from selling shares, almost all of which were granted to them. Despite often selling shares meaningfully below Mellanox's current share price, the majority of directors have sold vastly more stock than they hold today. The purpose of stock grants to directors is to increase alignment with shareholders and ensure that directors have a personal financial interest in the Company. The actions of Mellanox's non-executive directors suggest the opposite – that Mellanox's stock grants are really just a way of boosting director compensation.

Source: Bloomberg, Company filings, BamSEC. Reflects ownership of all current non-executive directors; includes certain unvested Restricted Share Units.

Our goal is for Mellanox to create substantial value for the benefit of all shareholders. We believe that Mellanox is a fantastic investment today, with substantial opportunities to meaningfully outperform its peers going forward, and we are excited to be the Company's largest shareholder. Shareholders want a Board that is just as excited to own substantial amounts of stock, and based on the Board's record of one-sided selling, it appears that the Company's current Board is not. Given the current Board's apparent lack of interest in Mellanox's stock, why should shareholders believe in the current Board to lead Mellanox forward?

We remain open to having discussions with you and the Board in order to reach a constructive solution that will position the Company for long-term success. Our focus is on ensuring that the best interests of all shareholders are represented. Shareholders deserve a board that is fully committed to Mellanox, that has skin in the game, and that has the expertise and objectivity necessary to ensure that value is created for all shareholders. We remain available to speak with you and members of the Board to discuss these topics further.

Best Regards,
