Prospectus Summary

7. We note your use of non-GAAP-based compound annual growth rates. You should balance this data with additional data to put the information in the proper context. In that regard please provide the amounts of EBITDA, adjusted EBITDA, net income and adjusted net income for each of 2007, 2008 and 2009 as well as the annual growth rate of each from 2007 to 2008 and 2008 to 2009. You should also provide the GAAP-based CAGR for net income. If you are unable to calculate the GAAP-based CAGR please explain why this is so. An explanation of “compound annual growth rate” should be provided. Please briefly disclose the extent to which the growth in sales data reflects price or volume changes. If this additional information is too detailed for the summary, please relocate this information to the main body of the prospectus.
8. Please briefly describe the geographical distribution of your sales and include more detail regarding such distribution in your “Business” section.
9. Please revise the discussion in the third paragraph of this section to define the term “INOcal calibration gases.”

Moreover, you note that the third party sources you refer to in the document “do not guarantee the accuracy or completeness of such information.” This may imply that you do not have to take responsibility for information from third parties you include in the prospectus. Use of Proceeds, page 41

29. It appears that concurrent with the proposed offering of $200 million of common stock, the company will also incur $250 million of indebtedness. As a result, on or about the closing of the offering, the company will have approximately $450 million available to it. We understand that from this aggregate amount, the company intends to use $175 million to repay outstanding indebtedness and $130 million to pay a dividend to its current shareholders. Accordingly, it appears that the discussion of the use of the proceeds from the offering should be expanded to also describe the concurrent loan transaction, the aforementioned use of proceeds, and the anticipated use of net available cash of approximately $140 million after all these transactions occur.

30. Please expand the discussion to indicate the approximate amount of the proceeds that will be allocated to development of your product and product candidates, foreign expansion, and acquisition and in-licensing opportunities, respectively.
