Raising $100 million to build two major USO Centers to support wounded warriors at the new expanded facilities at the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Maryland, and a new medical campus at Ft. Belvoir, Virginia. The centers will offer a continuum of care to wounded warriors and their families and the families of the fallen, including those suffering from both visible and invisible wounds of war. The goal is to help meet the most important non-medical needs these troops and their families have from the time of their evacuation from the battlefield until their return to their communities at home prepared for a happy and full life.
