CNBC, Bloomberg, The Wall Street Journal...these are well-know brands, but how many millennials do you know who read and love them?

Millennial reader composition:

- The Wall Street Journal: 28%
- Bloomberg: 29%
- CNBC: Lowest overall viewership since 1995¹

The legacy outlets have are struggling to captivate one of America's most powerful generations.

¹ In 2014—its least-watched year since 1995—CNBC had an average audience of 177,000 people from the hours of 9:30 a.m. and 5 p.m., according to Nielsen (Source: WSJ).

the HUSTLE

We believe The Hustle is A daily email that concisely tells readers what's going on with business and culture in a conversational, witty, and irreverent tone

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL. +  = the HUSTLE

Our mission is to be always reliable like the WSJ and consistently funny like the Daily show. We plan to become the most trusted brand for ambitious young professionals, and we're starting with business.

So, who reads The Hustle?

- 71% male
- 65% of readers are between 18-34 years old
- Mostly live in big cities
- Mostly work in tech, advertising, and business development

Our target customers are young, hip, smart, influential, rich, and are notoriously hard to impress.

Marketers call them HENRY's (High Earning, Not Rich Yet). We call them friends.

And here's what they look like...

Photos from Hustle Con*, our annual conference where nearly 1,500 attendees flew in from 26 countries.

* Hustle Con was created by the founders of The Hustle in 2014 and is currently owned by The Hustle.

Testimonials

We own our audience's attention each morning at 9:00 AM

It's the only email I read every day and it's my main source of news, and let me tell you — I'm lovin'it.

- Kasey Luck

So I'm repping the clique AND EVEN got the ambassador link on my Instagram URL (no lie).

- Juan Pereyda

What does caffeine and the HUSTLE have in common to me? Both change my entire view of the world every day between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Thank you for existing.

- Jason

Really impressed with the quality of the daily email, you guys are killing it.

- Walker Williams (founder of Teespring)

Guys,

I noticed today's email was a few minutes late. What's going on? I've scheduled my morning routine around reading The Hustle, so please don't be late otherwise I can't start my day!

- Nikhil Arora (founder of Back to the Roots)

Hey, Hustlers.

I just wanted to say: The Hustle is one of the best parts of my day. My work day. In fact, I'd say it's the second best part of my work day, right after the part where I walk out the door and make like a tree.

But seriously. Love you guys. Keep it up!

- Ries "You Should Subscribe To The Hustle" Murphy

Your writing on The Hustle, consistency of tone and spirit across topics is a rare talent. Keep it up!

- Scott Belsky (founder of Behance and partner at Benchmark)

So... what's our next goal for The Hustle?

We plan to grow to 1 million
daily users with an industry crushing open rate

Our plan for the next five years

Advertising: We believe advertising will be our biggest source of revenue in the near term. Because of our engagement, we're able to charge ~$30 per 1,000 email sends. Example: Refinery29 $80m+ revenue, Bleacher Report $100m+ revenue

Events: Along with helping grow our brand and meeting our users, we expect events to be a major revenue source as well. Example: Web Summit, TED

Products: As we get to know our readers and see the data, we'll create products for them. Example: Twitch, PopSugar (ShopStyle)
