Chief Technology Officer

Anton is one of the most intelligent, most experienced, most diligent software engineers I have ever hired. His breadth of expertise in a wide range of programming languages is unparalleled. His code writing is world class, and he always delivers on time. His ability to solve the most complex problems is truly exemplary. He also has a strong ability to audit other programmer's code writing, and works with them to become better coders. Anton played a very critical role leading the international team in developing very critical components in Simplenight's massive system, as well as complete the most complex integrations on both ends of the Global Distribution System. Anton will be an enormous asset at any company who hires him.

his strong points is self-sufficiency related to work: being able to deeply understand business needs and choose the best suitable solution by himself, he's not just a coder but a true developer. Not limited to existing task pool, he often suggests useful improvements to the product that are employed in the release and show effectiveness.

Anton complies with deadlines and properly estimates the time required for the job. We hired him to create a second version of our project Tourbina. He quickly blended into the team and established himself as a great developer.

I can, with peace of mind, recommend him to anyone looking for references. I am confident that he will make a significant contribution to the development of any product.
