

00:00

Popover : the classic New England treat, light, buttery, delicious. Those look good behind you.

00:06

Now, it's moving from treat to star! Jackie Bruno has "Uniquely Boston" story about the popular pastry.

00:16

Welcome to Popover King! Thank you

00:20

On Boston's Canal Street, just a stone's throw away from the TD Garden is a cafe devoted to popovers

00:30

Owner Coco Love fell in love with this New England treat shortly after she moved to Boston 5 years ago

00:37

It was really really that kind of a food that you just want to keep eating especially with butter. I immediately thought that this was a perfect canvas

00:40

00:44

So after researching traditional recipes she began experimenting

00:51

I knew I could fill it with all sorts of stuff because it's hollow.

00:53

The first thought since I was so close to the North End was Huh cannoli sweetened ricotta. She added fresh berries and maple and created The Royal.

00:57

01:02

So you made this at home and you said this is a winner we have to start a restaurant.

01:08

Pretty much!

01:09

Other offerings include this decadent chocolate filled popover or savory options like the Friar Tuck.

01:16

It's got all my favorite stuff inside it. Pesto, cheese, bacon

01:22

Oh yeah, that's just good as I thought it was gonna be. And then there's this :

01:26

The Rum Tum Ditty. We're sort of reimagining a sandwich by using popovers as the base

01:31

And look how gorgeous it is. That's like Ready for Instagram.

01:35

And ready to be eaten! And with a menu this large, there's something for almost everyone.

01:41

Jackie Bruno, NBC 10 Boston