“I enjoy watching the games. It seems a bit more real than over-commercialized top-flight matches. Plus, I love not having VAR!”

Flat out, there's no better time to be supporting women's sports, especially soccer. And Sierra Cristiano, Chris Sydney, and Fan Owned Club are building something special in Austria as the FC Pinzgau Saalfelden women will play their first match in the 2nd division later this month.

Stay tuned for some exciting news about the new players that will be joining us in Saalfelden this fall.

The legacy of the 2023 FIFA Women's World Cup will not only be incredible football - it will be indisputably proving that it's good business for brands to invest in women's sports.

For brands that are thinking about sponsoring women's sports (and need more proof that it's a good business proposition) there are two new reports from The Collective at Wasserman + RBC and from The Office for Women in Sport and Recreation in Victoria, Australia that use data to show how lucrative sponsoring women's sports can be.

I wrote a short article that summarizes the key takeaways from both reports - and shared my thoughts around why it won't be surprising if after this World Cup more brands sign-on to sponsor women's sports - even if it means moving dollars out of men's sports to invest more in women.

New Data: It's (Indisputably) Good Business For Brands to Sponsor Women's Sports

What a great way to end the week - solid progress on two big but not quite ready for prime time partnerships and this wonderful pic featuring two new Fan Owners taken at a recent Minnesota United FC match. Guys, you are styling!

You could look this cool, too. Join our Fan Owner movement at <https://wefunder/fanownedclub/>
