What do these companies do?

Legacy, a start-up out of Harvard Innovation Lab, began in 2018 to make "inconvenient meetings with physicians a thing of the past." Customers mail their semen to the company in temperature-controlled kits. Then Legacy, in partnership with clinical labs, analyzes the deposit for factors like sperm motility and quality, provides recommendations if necessary and sets up a plan to cryogenically store the best sperm. "We are working

Founder & CEO

Legacy

2018 – Present · 2 yrs
Greater Boston Area

Legacy was incubated at the Harvard Innovation Labs before joining Y Combinator's accelerator program. Founded by a team of healthcare and fertility experts, Legacy aims to change outdated views around fertility with a straightforward, accessible, and trusted product for men.

Investors include Bain Capital Ventures and Section 32, and you can learn more about the company in recent coverage by the Washington Post, Economist, New York Times, CNBC, and others.

A few things you may not know because nobody talks about it:

Senior Manager & Global Leadership Fellow

World Economic Forum
2016 – 2018 · 2 yrs
Geneva Area, Switzerland

Managed relationships in the Middle East with key constituents including Ministers, CEOs and entrepreneurs. Created and ran the '100 best Arab start-ups' initiative and had a white paper on Entrepreneurship in the Arab world published at Davos in Jan 2018. Learned about Swiss precision, punctuality, and privacy and also that at Davos, there's always a party you're not invited to.

Senior Consultant, Healthcare & Life Sciences

Oliver Wyman
2011 – 2014 · 3 yrs
Toronto, Canada Area

Specialized in Health & Life Sciences. I was a terrible consultant when I began and it took me a torturous year to catch up to my peers, but I did and eventually secured an 'Above and Beyond' award for outstanding performance.

Volunteer Consultant

UN Women
2013 · less than a year
Middle East

Focused on helping Palestinian women set up and expand their own businesses. This was much more complex than expected and an important reminder why neoliberal views on 'empowerment' can be simplistic and paternalistic. During this time in my life, I also learned about intersectionality,

Education

Harvard University

Master in Public Policy

Received full scholarship to attend as a Center for Public Leadership Fellow. Received highest distinction on thesis, elected as class representative both years, served as President of the Harvard Arab Students Association, and in Prof. Jarding's class, was elected president of the United States (go figure).

McGill University

BComm, Triple Concentration: Finance, Information Systems, Organizational Behaviour

Three cheers for McGill!
