Summary

Working for a small company means you will have different hats, I had the privilege of working for ProBility Media Corp in their IT Desk Help, along with being Chief Engineer and Sales Engineer; for over 5 years I learned valuable professional skills such as advanced technology, team work, and vast programming languages. In both my academic and professional life, I have been consistently praised as hard-working by my professors and peers. Whether working on academic, extracurricular, or professional projects, I apply proven technical, service, and problem-solving skills, which I hope to leverage into the sales engineer role at your company.

After high-school, I went to the Israeli Defense force where I served in a tank unit. After four years in the IDF, I started college at the University of Houston. After about six months of working in real estate, I saw it was not for me, and I looked for a job in IT. This is how I found ProBility Media. ProBility is an Educational media corporation. We are about 130 workers that started off as a bookstore and then transitioned into a media corporation. In the company, I started as a web developer. After about six months I started working in desk help where I would interact with customers, and that's when I started working in sales. After nearly two years in college, I wanted to be involved more in the tech side. So I became the system administrator for the company. After I graduated college, I became the chief engineer for the company. And while being involved with all the development of all the products, I was the Sales Engineer for all of the VR Products we have created.

In my time at ProBility Media Corporation, I was doing both IT and Sales, and now I would like to do both. I hope that you think I would be a good fit for your company.
