contractors. Unlike larger commercial and residential contractors, home renovators usually get project information by meeting with clients – not by looking at architectural plans. Frank serves this use case by allowing contractors to answer a series of project questions on site, in dialogue with the client. By the time they walk out the door, Frank automatically produces a detailed project ballpark that's ready to share. Once contractors get back to the office, they can use Frank's powerful localized pricing database to quickly transform those onsite
