Invest in one of the best performing asset classes

Access to today's exciting private companies before they go public

Venture capital has historically been one of the best performing asset classes, generating a remarkable 19% average annual net return in the last 10 years and 25% average annual net return in the last 25 years*. Previously, however, individual investors have largely been restricted from investing in venture capital, instead having to wait until after companies go public (when much of the return has already been captured) before they can get in.
