2 / 6

As the property owner, we have engaged a home builder to perform the land development, which essentially means taking raw land and performing all the improvements needed before vertical construction can begin.

We have an agreement with the builder whereby they are entitled to buy the finished lots from us at a set price. To maintain these rights, they have agreed to pay a fixed monthly payment, which functions similarly to an interest payment.

FIXED MONTHLY

3 / 6

Our Fixed Income strategy seeks to generate above-market yields by providing creative and comprehensive financing solutions underpinned by high-quality real estate. We seek to lend with a margin of safety to product types with high durability of demand (e.g., housing) and real constraints on new supply, thereby supporting property values.

- Risk-return profile:
Low to moderate
- Expected timing / delay of returns:
Typically immediately after acquisition
- Expected source of returns:
Interest income

Note that this section is intended to provide a general overview of the Fixed Income strategy for educational purposes only, and is not meant to be representative of the specific details of any individual investment. All investments involve risk and there are no guarantees of any returns.

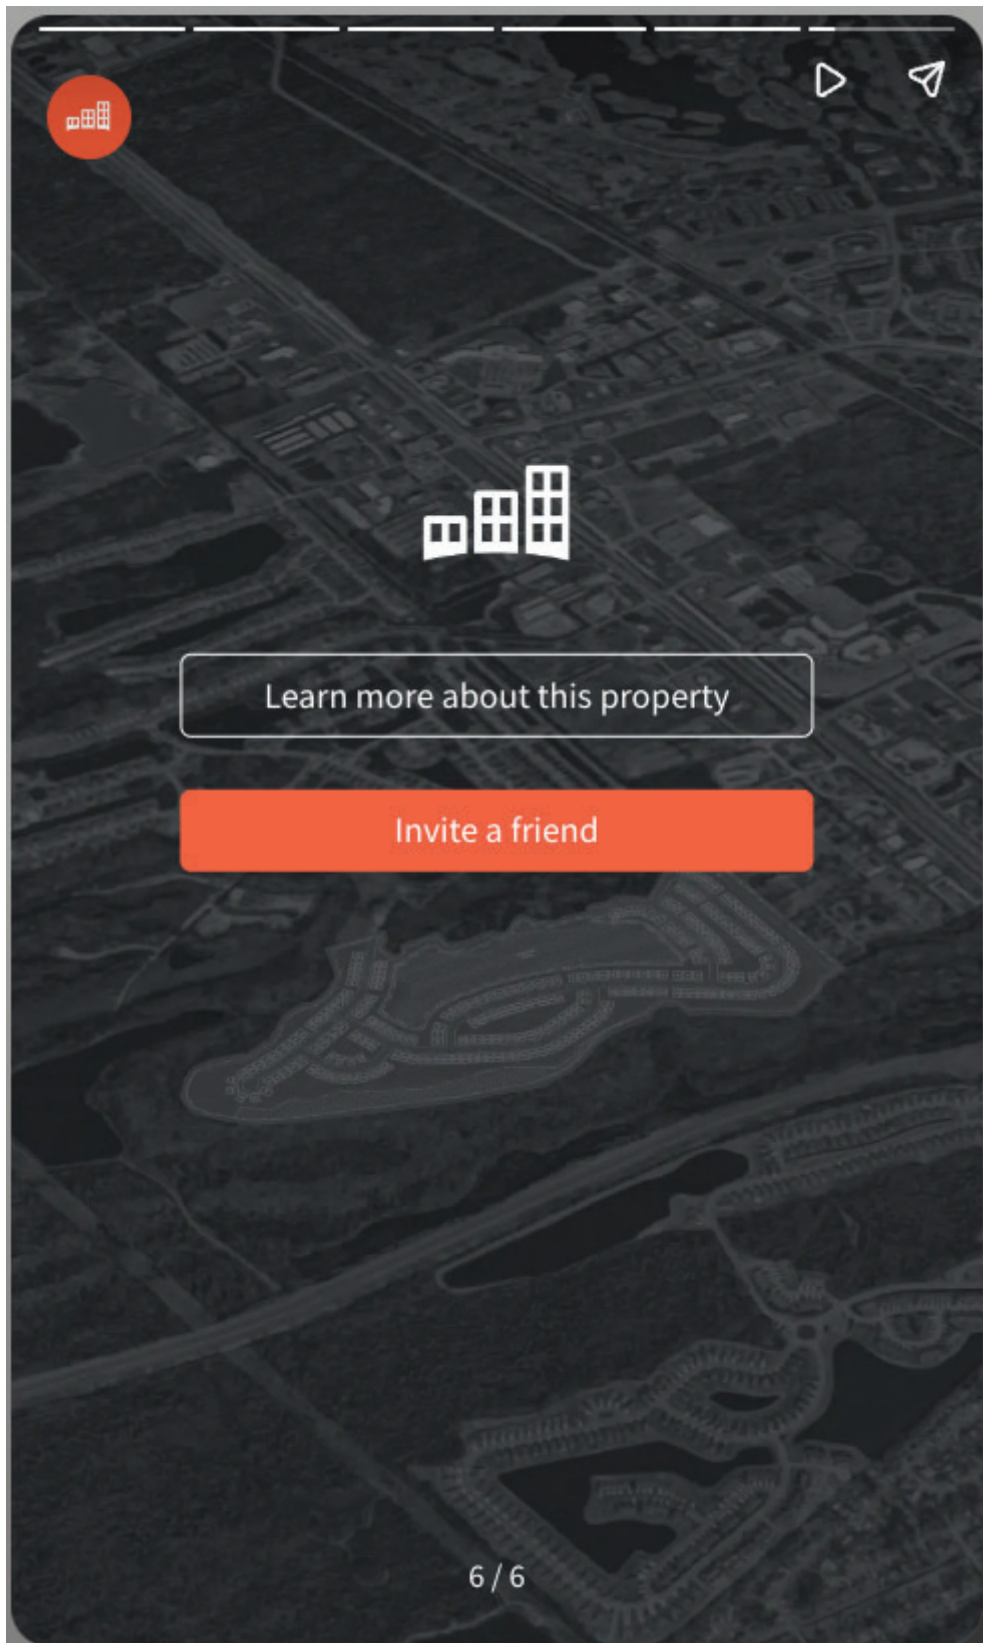

At a strategic level, this investment fits within our affordably-priced Sunbelt apartment / rental housing thesis.

As we referenced in our Mid-Year Letter, we think this kind of housing is a significant reason why the overall Fundrise portfolio is an attractive asset in the current environment, with inflation at historical highs and a recession taking hold.
