About Virtual Film School

Virtual Film School™ a Delaware registered company. VFS is built for online learning and teaching the visual arts. VFS teaches New Media literacy for non-media majors. While many students don’t major in media, most would benefit from New Media literacy in a digital social era where employers value digital identity over a four-year degree. Most universities show students how to spend money. VFS builds better human capital and shows students how to make money, become visible to 21st Century employers, and win the job race when they graduate. Virtual Film School serves underserved markets and revolutionizes traditional film school. But a meta-media school is nothing without student success stories to drive enrollments. Virtual Film School has that, ensuring market demand and ROI for our backers. We’ve taught two billion hitter

FreddieW, Primetime Emmy Award winner Bernie Su, 2-billion view TikTok star Nicki Baber, and many others. And unlike traditional film schools that reject most applicants and teach outdated techniques and tools, our popular thought leaders and New Media Influencer-Instructors teach students anywhere in the world how to become successful content creators inside a live and interactive Metaverse classroom. VFS is relevant, affordable, immersive, and capable of reaching every student in the free world with a WiFi signal. And because we have no old school brick and mortar infrastructure, we pass that 90% savings on to our students (and investors).
