Risk Factors

You Might Lose Your Money

When you buy a certificate of deposit from a bank, the Federal government (through the FDIC) guarantees your money. However, a Note is not like that at all. The ability of Molly's Hatchet, LLC to make the payments you expect, and ultimately the success of the business, depends on a number of factors, including many beyond our control.

Limited Services

Molly's Hatchet, LLC operates with a very limited scope, offering only particular services to potential clients, based on their preferences.

Lack of Accounting Controls

Larger companies typically have in place strict accounting controls. Smaller companies typically lack these controls, which is an additional risk.

a newly established entity and therefore has no operating history from which forecasts could be projected w

Inability to Sell Your Investment

The law prohibits you from selling your securities (except in certain very limited circumstances) for 12 months. During that one-year period, a host of Federal and State securities laws may limit or restrict your ability to sell your securities. If you want to sell, you will likely have difficulty finding a buyer because there will be no established market. Given these restrictions, you may have to hold your investment for its full term.

The Company Might Need More Capital

Molly's Hatchet, LLC might need to raise more capital in the future to fund/expand operations, buy property, hire employees, market its services, pay overhead and general administrative expenses, or a variety of other reasons. There is no guarantee that additional capital will be available when needed, or that it will be available on terms that are not adverse to you. If Molly's Hatchet, LLC is unable to obtain additional funding when needed, it could be forced to delay its business plan or even fail altogether.

Changes in Economic Conditions Could Hurt Molly's Hatchet, LLC

Factors like global or national economic recessions, changes in interest rates, changes in credit markets, changes in employment, changes in real estate values, changes in tax policy, changes in political conditions, and many other factors are unpredictable and could negatively affect Molly's Hatchet, LLC's financial performance or ability to operate. If Molly's Hatchet, LLC ceases operations due to the foregoing factors, it can not guarantee that it will be able to generate revenue in the future.

No Registration Under Securities Laws

The Notes will not be registered with the SEC or the securities regulator of any State. Hence, neither Molly's Hatchet, LLC nor the Notes will be subject to the same degree of regulation and scrutiny as if they were registered.

Incomplete Offering Information

Title III does not require us to provide you with all the information that would be required in some other kinds of securities offerings, such as a public offering of shares (for example, publicly-traded firms must generally provide investors with quarterly financial statements that have been audited by an independent accounting firm). Although Title III does require extensive information, it is not as comprehensive as that required in a public offering. You may make a different decision if you had more information.

Lack of Ongoing Information

Molly's Hatchet, LLC will be required to provide some information to investors for at least 12 months following the offering. However, this information is far more limited than the information that would be required of a publicly-reporting company; Molly's Hatchet, LLC may choose to stop providing annual information in certain circumstances.

Future Investors Might Have Superior Rights

If Molly's Hatchet, LLC needs more capital in the future and takes on additional debt or other sources of financing, they might have rights superior to yours. For example, they might have the right to be paid before you are, to receive larger dividends, to elect or remove directors, to elect or remove members of the management, or otherwise.

The Company is Not Subject to the Corporate Governance Requirements of the National Securities Exchange

Any company whose securities are listed on a national stock exchange (for example, the New York Stock Exchange) is subject to the rules about corporate governance that are intended to protect investors. For example, the major U.S. stock exchanges require a company to have an audit committee made up entirely of independent members of the board of directors (i.e., directors who are not affiliated with Molly's Hatchet, LLC or management), which is responsible for monitoring Molly's Hatchet, LLC's financial reporting. Molly's Hatchet, LLC will not be required to implement these and other investor protections.

You Have a Limited Upside

Notes include a maximum amount you can receive. You cannot receive more than that even if Molly's Hatchet, LLC becomes more successful than your initial expectations.

You Do Have a Downside

Conversely, if Molly's Hatchet, LLC fails to generate enough revenue, you could lose some or all of your money.

Payments and Return Are Unpredictable

Because your payments are based on the revenue of Molly's Hatchet, LLC, and the revenue of Molly's Hatchet, LLC can disappear altogether) unpredictably, it is impossible to predict how much you will receive and when. And because the revenue is unpredictable, so is your ultimate return.

The Notes Are Unsecured and Uninsured

The Notes are not secured by any collateral, nor are they guaranteed or insured by the FDIC or any other entity.

Subordination

The Notes shall be subordinated to all indebtedness of Molly's Hatchet, LLC to banks, commercial finance companies, and/or other institutions regularly engaged in the business of lending money.

Lack of Guaranty

The Notes are not personally guaranteed by any of the founders or any other person.

Limitation of Individual Rights in Event of Default
