Financial Condition

No operating history

Provisions Trading Company was established in January 2022. Accordingly, there are limited financial statement review. When evaluating this investment opportunity, investors should consider factors outlined in the risk section.

Risk Factors

You Might Also Want to Know

other competitors could negatively affect Provisions Trading Company's financial performance.

Reliance on Management

As a securities holder, you will not be able to participate in Provisions Trading Company's management or vote decisions regarding Provisions Trading Company. Furthermore, if the founders or other key personnel of Provisions Trading Company or become unable to work, Provisions Trading Company (and your investment) could be negatively affected.

Financial Forecasts Risks

The financial forecasts provided by us herein are reasonable forecasts by us based upon assumption of stable economic conditions and various assumptions regarding operations. The validity and accuracy of these assumptions will depend in large part on the success of Provisions Trading Company and the key persons will have no control. Changes in assumptions or their underlying events could affect the forecasts. To the extent that the assumed events do not occur, the outcome may vary significantly from the projections. There can be no assurance that the actual operating results will correspond to the forecasts provided herein. As Provisions Trading Company is a newly established entity and therefore has no operating history from which forecasts could be prepared, the forecasts are highly speculative.

Inability to Sell Your Investment

The law prohibits you from selling your securities (except in certain very limited circumstances) for 12 months after the date of the offering. During this one-year period, a host of Federal and State securities laws may limit or restrict your ability to sell your securities. As a result, you will likely have difficulty finding a buyer because there will be no established market. Given these factors, you should not expect to liquidate your investment for its full term.

The Company Might Need More Capital

Provisions Trading Company might need to raise more capital in the future to fund/expand operations, buy more equipment, hire more members, market its services, pay overhead and general administrative expenses, or a variety of other reasons. There is no assurance that additional capital will be available when needed, or that it will be available on terms that are not adverse to your interests. If Provisions Trading Company is unable to obtain additional funding when needed, it could be forced to delay its business plan or even cease operations.

Changes in Economic Conditions Could Hurt Provisions Trading Company

Factors like global or national economic recessions, changes in interest rates, changes in credit markets, changes in consumer spending, declining employment, changes in real estate values, changes in tax policy, changes in political conditions, and other factors are unpredictable and could negatively affect Provisions Trading Company's financial performance or even cause it to cease operations. If Provisions Trading Company ceases operations due to the foregoing factors, it can not guarantee that it will be able to generate revenue in the future.

No Registration Under Securities Laws

The Notes will not be registered with the SEC or the securities regulator of any State. Hence, neither Provisions Trading Company nor the Notes will be subject to the same degree of regulation and scrutiny as if they were registered.

Changes in Laws

Changes in laws or regulations, including but not limited to zoning laws, environmental laws, tax laws, consumer protection laws, antitrust laws, and health care laws, could negatively affect Provisions Trading Company's financial performance. Specifically, any additional regulation on the industry could significantly negatively affect the business.

Conflict of Interest With Companies and Their Management

In many ways, your interests and the interests of Provisions Trading Company's management will coincide: you want the Company to be as successful as possible. However, your interests might be in conflict in other important areas. Provisions Trading Company might prefer to act conservatively to make sure they are best equipped to repay the Note obligations. The Company might prefer to spend aggressively to invest in the business. You would like to keep the compensation as low as possible, while the management wants to make as much as they can.

Future Investors Might Have Superior Rights

If Provisions Trading Company needs more capital in the future and takes on additional debt or other securities, those future investors could have rights superior to yours. For example, they might have the right to be paid before you are, to receive large dividends, or to have a voice in management, or otherwise.

The Company is Not Subject to the Corporate Governance Requirements of the National Securities Exchanges

Any company whose securities are listed on a national stock exchange (for example, the New York Stock Exchange) is subject to rules about corporate governance that are intended to protect investors. For example, the major U.S. stock exchanges require an audit committee made up entirely of independent members of the board of directors (i.e., directors with no material relationship to Provisions Trading Company or management), which is responsible for monitoring Provisions Trading Company's financial reporting. Provisions Trading Company will not be required to implement these and other investor protections.

You Have a Limited Upside

Notes include a maximum amount you can receive. You cannot receive more than that even if Provisions Trading Company is more successful than your initial expectations.

You Do Have a Downside

Conversely, if Provisions Trading Company fails to generate enough revenue, you could lose some or all of your investment.

Payments and Return Are Unpredictable

Because your payments are based on the revenue of Provisions Trading Company, and the revenue of Provisions Trading Company can go up or down (or even disappear altogether) unpredictably, it is impossible to predict how much you will receive and when you will receive it, so your ultimate return is unpredictable.

COVID-19 Impact

The ongoing COVID-19 pandemic may impact the Company's ability to generate revenue and/or continue operations due to COVID-19 restrictions, the Company can not guarantee that it will resume operations in the future.

Investor Discussion

Provisions Trading Company isn't accepting investments right now, but is trying to get a sense of how they should not need to provide any money, and we won't be accepting money or selling securities, until all of its forms will be able to ultimately invest. All investments will must be done through Mainvest.com. Once the offering goes live, you'll be able to invest.
