people spend $93B on haircare products that overpromise and underdeliver every year

American women spend nearly a quarter of $1 million on their appearance in their lifetime and a whopping 44% of Americans are taking care of themselves less in 2023 because it's so expensive.

Not only are natural haircare products pricey, they often contain subpar ingredients and inadequate formulations that fall short of their promises – they just don't work. Despite their natural claims, they sometimes contain harmful substances that can strip hair of its natural oils and even cause hormonal and endocrine system disruptions.

HARMFUL CHEMICALS HIDING IN CONVENTIONAL HAIRCARE

BENZENE

Known carcinogen that can increase the risk of leukemia and other blood disorders

FORMALDEHYDE

Carcinogenic preservative that can cause respiratory issues and skin irritation

DIMETHICONE

Silicone that can trap impurities, leading to skin irritation and breakouts

SODIUM LAURYL SULFATE

Harsh detergent that strips natural oils, causing dry, brittle hair and scalp irritation

PARABENS

Preservatives suspected of disrupting hormone function and potentially linked to breast cancer and reproductive issues

This costly cycle of trial and error without results highlights a huge gap in the market.

we're establishing a global footprint with prestige beauty retailers

Our business model is a powerful combination of direct-to-consumer (DTC) sales and strategic retail partnerships.

Melanin Haircare launched online, initially targeting Whitney's community, and quickly expanded to the broader natural hair community. This DTC strategy allowed us to grow not only organically but quickly. By starting with direct-to-consumer, we fostered a loyal customer base that asked for Melanin Haircare in their local stores, in turn attracting the attention of the world's largest beauty retailers that have since become Melanin Haircare's primary revenue, on track to hit $8M in 2024 revenue alone.
