BUSINESS AND ANTICIPATED BUSINESS PLAN

The Company's business plan is described below.

Description of the Business

GENESIS DEVELOPMENT CAPITAL, LLC is being created to find the best, highest volume, store locations for high credit national retail tenants by becoming an extension of their real estate team. The Company provides value to these retailers by outsourcing a variety of real property matters, including site selection, site development, and property management. This offering is designed to generate sufficient capital to enter into one or more projects. After projects are developed, the Company will attempt to sell the project(s), which is the primary method of generating income for the Company. After liquidation of the project(s), the Managing Member intends to cease operations, and "wind up" the Company, at which point the Investors' Interests will be considered redeemed in full.

Other Property Information

Business Plan

Our process:

(1) Identify The Client's Site Needs:

We ascertain the specific needs, criteria and desires of our clients for a specific development. Based on those criteria, we build models and scenarios that help us determine the most ideal sites for our clients based, in part, on macro and micro economic projections, consumer consumption patterns, income level and socioeconomic dynamics of a desired area.

(2) Identify Ideal Site Locations:

Our team makes contact with reputable commercial real estate professionals from our relationship network that are familiar with the area. Once we have narrowed down the list of potential sites, our team puts "boots on the ground" to tour the most appealing site prospects.

(3) Socializing Site Selections:

Once our team has identified 2-3 sites that are the most ideal fit for our client, we present those sites to the client's internal real estate team for feedback and consensus.

(4) Securing The Site:

Once we have gained positive feedback and consensus from our client's internal real estate team, we move to contract and deploy our firm's funds into escrow (earnest money deposit) we then submit our contract, site selection specification and deal memo to our client firms committee for final approvals and sign off.

(5) Closing The Deal:

Once final approval and sign-off from our Client firm have been gained and we have an executed acquisition agreement in place between our firm and our client's firm, we move to close on the site and begin site development.

Our business plan and process ensure the lowest capital risk exposure to our firm before signed acquisition agreement. This ensures that the sites we select have the highest probability of gaining committee approval within our client firms. Finally, our business plan and process ensure that we are not risking our firm's equity investor capital or credit facilities by closing on deals that will be undeliverable to our client firms. This ensures that we will not sustain unnecessary carry costs associated with having to hold sites longer than our projected estimates and protects our firm market credibility and our financial partner(s) capital.

Use of Proceeds Related to Business Operations

RISK FACTORS

General Risk Factors

An investment in the Company involves significant risks not associated with other investment vehicles and is suitable only for persons of adequate financial means who have no need for liquidity in this investment. There can be no assurances or guarantees that: (i) the Company's investment objectives will prove successful; or (ii) Investors will not lose all or a portion of their investment in the Company. It is impossible to accurately predict the results of an investment in the Company due to the recent formation of the Company, as well as general uncertainties regarding real estate markets and financing markets, and general economic conditions. This Offering Memorandum and other materials provided by the Company, contain forward-looking predictions and projections, and speculative statements and projections which involve risks and uncertainties. These statements are not guarantees or assurances of any future events. Actual events could differ substantially from statements and projections contained herein. Although the Company and the Managing Member believes that these statements and projections are reasonable under the circumstances, projections are necessarily speculative. Projections are inherently unreliable and unanticipated events and circumstances are likely to occur. Actual results realized during any future period are likely to vary from projections, and the variations may be material and adverse. Neither the Company, the Managing Member, nor any other person make any representations or warranty as to the accuracy or completeness of this information. The information presented is as of the date hereof and is subject to change or amendment without notice. Prospective investors are cautioned not to place any reliance on the projections. The projections should be read in conjunction with the information contained in this Memorandum, including the section entitled RISK FACTORS.

You should consider carefully the following risks, and should consult with your own legal, tax and financial advisors with respect thereto. You should read this entire Memorandum and any additional materials, including but not limited to the Operating Agreement and the Subscription Agreement, before investing in the Company.

The Interests may not be a suitable investment for you. Prospective Investors should consult with their own tax, legal, and financial advisors prior to purchasing any Interests. The characteristics of the Interests, including lack of liquidity, may not satisfy your investment objectives. The Interests may not be a suitable investment for you based upon your ability to withstand a financial loss, or other aspects of your financial situation including but not limited to your income, net worth, present, near term, and long-term financial needs, investment risk profile, return objectives, and investment experience, as well as other factors.

An Investor should regard an investment in the Company as a supplement to an overall investment program and should only invest if it is willing to undertake the risks involved. In addition, Investors who are subject to income tax should be aware that an investment in the Company is likely (if the Company is successful) to create taxable income or tax liabilities in excess of cash distributions to pay such liabilities.

An Investor must be aware that there is no way that the Company can be aware of all risks involved in any investment, or in this particular investment. Further, the following list is not intended to be a complete, exhaustive list of every single risk involved in any real estate investment, or in this particular investment. The Investor should rely on his or her own knowledge, experience and resources, including but not limited to trusted advisors such as attorneys, financial advisors, and accountants.

An Investor's subscription will be irrevocable. The execution and delivery of the Subscription Agreement by a subscriber constitutes a binding offer. Once a prospective investor subscribes, the prospective investor will not be able to revoke such subscription

Federal Income Tax Consequences. There are no known tax benefits associated with this investment. PROSPECTIVE INVESTORS ARE URGED TO CONSULT THEIR OWN TAX ADVISORS REGARDING THE FEDERAL, STATE AND LOCAL TAX CONSEQUENCES OF AN INVESTMENT IN THE COMPANY WITH SPECIFIC REFERENCE TO THEIR INDIVIDUAL TAX SITUATIONS AND POTENTIAL CHANGES IN APPLICABLE LAWS.

Classification for Federal Income Tax Purposes. The choice of tax classification may impact the proceeds, revenues, and income of the Company, and therefore any distributions. It is possible that another classification other than that chosen by the Company may yield additional income and therefore distributions, if said classification would have been chosen. Accordingly, distributions may be less than they otherwise would have been under a different income tax classification.

State and Local Tax Consequences. An Investor's tax obligation to any states and/or municipalities can only be determined by the Investor, and its advisors, and cannot be determined by the Company or any representatives of the Company. Prior to Investing, a prospective Investor should consult with tax professionals to determine any possible tax liability to any states and/or municipalities.

Tax Audit and Validity of Tax Deductions. The information returns filed by the Company may be audited by the Internal Revenue Service ("Service"). Any audit by the Service may result in adjustments to the various items reported by the Company. In such event, each Investor will be required to file amended Federal income tax returns for his taxable years with respect to which the adjusted Company items were reported and pay additional tax (together with interest and any applicable penalties) attributable to the adjustments. Further, an audit of the Company information returns may result in an audit of each Investor's income tax returns which could result in adjustments of non-Company as well as Company items.

The Company will claim all deductions for Federal income tax purposes which it reasonably believes it is entitled to claim. There can be no assurance that the amount or timing of such deductions will not be successfully challenged by the Service.

Tax Liabilities in Later Years. After the Company has operated for a period of time, it is possible that the Investor's share of Company taxable income and tax liability with respect thereto may exceed cash distributions from the Company, in which case the Investor will have to pay such excess tax liability with funds derived from sources other than the Company. These possibilities may occur if all or a portion of the Company's taxable income is used to make nondeductible payments (for example, to make capital expenditures or to repay the principal amount of Company borrowings) or if a portion of the Company's taxable income is not received in cash.

The amount of gain realized by an Investor on the sale or other disposition (including a gift) of the Interests or the share of Company gains on a sale (including a sale pursuant to foreclosure proceedings) or other disposition of the Property may exceed the cash, if any, available to the Investor from such sale or other disposition. Moreover, it is possible that the tax liability with respect to such gain may exceed the cash available to him, in which case the excess tax liability will have to be paid by the Investor from sources other than the Company.

Changes in Tax Laws. There is no assurance that tax benefits provided by existing law will continue. Tax benefits of an investment in the Company could be lost, and substantial tax liabilities could be incurred, because of changes in the tax laws. There also is no assurance that changes in the interpretation of Federal income tax laws by administrative or judicial action will not adversely affect the tax consequences of an investment in the Company. Any legislative, administrative or judicial changes may affect not only the tax aspects of an investment prospectively, but also may be given retroactive effect.

Risks Related to This Investment

Capital Requirements. In order to acquire real property, the Company needs to raise capital, whether through lending or through investment. There is no guarantee that the Company will obtain the financing required to acquire the anticipated real estate, or, if an acquisition occurs, to meet ongoing financial obligations without seeking additional capital. There can be no assurance that additional capital will be available to the Company if and when required, or that if said capital is available, that it would be available at terms satisfactory to the Company. A failure to obtain capital when required may result in financial difficulties for the Company.

Financing Risks. The Company intends to borrow funds from a financial institution in order to finance the acquisition of real estate, and may also choose to borrow money from time to time from other lending entities, in amounts and upon terms that the Managing Member in its sole discretion determines. In addition, the Company may refinance the real property, or any part thereof, if available and determined to be advisable by the Managing Member in its sole discretion. The interest rates at which the Company is able to borrow funds will affect the Company's operating results, and the use of borrowing and/or leverage could result in a decrease in returns depending, in part, upon interest rates. The interest rates available to the Company at any given time are subject to a variety of factors, including but not limited to the Company's creditworthiness and past credit history, the prevailing interest rates available in the market at the time, financial and economic conditions existing in the region, country, or world at the time, and the amount sought to be borrowed. The Company may borrow funds anticipating an opportunity to refinance in the future at lower interest rates, but may be unable to do so, which could result in losses. The use of borrowing and/or leverage has the potential to increase losses the Company could incur. The Company may be unable to meet its obligations to a lender. If this occurs, the Company may be liable for increased payments and penalties to the lender. The lender may also foreclose, execute, or otherwise impair, sell or remove any collateral securing the funds. This occurrence could impair or make impossible the ability of the Company to operate or manage the Property. This could also make it difficult for the Company to obtain financing on favorable or any terms in the future. The ability of the Company to raise capital may be dependent on other terms of financing. Any financing obtained as acquisition or afterwards will likely require an appraisal of any real property. If any such appraisal does not return a valuation sufficient to justify lending, the Company may not be able to obtain necessary funds to operate, or otherwise refinance under more favorable terms, which could result in a loss.

Risks of Due Diligence. The Company anticipates entering into agreements to acquire real property. In the process of acquiring any real property, the Company and Managing Member may fail to discover significant matters which, if known, would have caused the Company and Managing Member to not proceed with the acquisition of said real property, or may discover matters that could result in significant future risk to the Company, and decide to proceed in acquiring said real property anyways. The Company and Managing Member may not investigate the Property and conduct due diligence in the manner in which you or anyone else would choose to do, and as a result, the Company and Managing Member could fail to learn about actual or potential defects or other issues with any real property which they otherwise would have learned of if certain methods of due diligence commonly known were utilized.

Reliance on Key Personnel. The success of any venture is dependent upon the availability of skilled personnel and the appropriate management philosophy and personalities for each aspect of the business of the Company. Real estate acquisition and development are particularly important areas which will require appropriate staff. In the specific case of this Company, the Officers previously identified are, in the opinion of the Company, crucial to the success of the Company. While the Managing Member and the Company believe that it has adequate and proven resources to assure adequate supervision and performance of construction and property management tasks, there can be no assurance that all needs can be met this way. Lack of qualified personnel could damage the Company's ability to realize its goals under the business plan.

Prior Investments No Indication of Future Performance. While the Managing Member and the principals have a track record of successful investments, their past investment performance cannot be relied upon as an indication of the Company's future performance or success. The examples which may be listed in other materials are solely included to illustrate representative transactions, the experience of the Managing Member and its affiliates and the type of transactions the Managing Member intends to pursue on behalf of the Company. Future investments by this Company into any real property will be unique and separate from any other investment by the any of the principals, and it is possible that its unique characteristics could result in challenges and risks never before encountered by the principals or third parties utilized by the Company. Said challenges and risks could result in losses to the Company.

Nature and Priority of the Interests. Transferability of the Interests is restricted under the Securities Act and by provision of applicable state securities laws. The Interests may not be sold or transferred by an Investor in the absence of an effective registration statement under the Securities Act and applicable state securities laws or an opinion of counsel acceptable to the Managing Member, the Company and their counsel that no registration is required. The Company does not intend to file a registration statement under the Securities Act to provide for a public resale of the Interests. There is currently no trading market for the Interests and it is not anticipate that a trading market will ever develop. Further, the Managing Member of the Company may, in its sole discretion, disallow any trades or transfer, regardless if said transfer would be violation of any relevant securities laws. Consequently, the Interests are suitable only for long-term investment by individuals or entities with no need for liquidity and who can absorb the loss of their entire investment in the Interests. Further, there is no collateral security, insurance or guarantee of the Company's payments on the Interests. The Interests are not secured by assets of any kind, including any assets owned by the Company. The Interests are not deposits in a bank, certificates of deposit or similar obligations of, and are not guaranteed or insured by, any depository institution, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, or any other governmental or private fund or entity. Therefore, if you invest in the Interests, you will have to rely on the Company's cash flow from operations and other sources of funds for distributions. In addition, the Interests lack priority in distribution of profits because mortgages and other debt may rank senior to any payments to owners of the Interests.

Delay of Investment. There will be a delay between the time Interests are sold and the time purchasers of Interests are admitted to the Company and are entitled to the investment yield, if any, being realized by the Company. During the intervening period, proceeds from the sale of Interests will be held in an escrow account, as described herein. The return to be realized in the escrow account, if any, will likely not be as high as other investments which you may have access to. This may result in losses to Investors relative to other investments they could have engaged in.

Limited Liability for the Company and Managing Member. The Company is obligated to indemnify the Managing Member and its affiliates, agents, directors, officers and owners against certain liabilities against claims from Investors and other parties. Generally speaking, Investors' ability to seek damages against the Company or the Managing Member is limited. A purchase of the Interests could result in a positive cash flow which would be available for distribution. However, it is possible that the Managing Member will determine to fund additional reserves from the cash flow generated by the Company and there may not be any cash available for distribution from operations. Investors will not be able to direct the operations of the Company nor its cash flows if any. Actions may be taken by the Company, the Managing Member or other affiliated parties, which are adverse to an Investor's interest, and the Investor may have little or no practical result, resulting in losses for the Investor.

Dilution of ownership interest in the Company is possible. If the Company conducts subsequent offerings or issuances of securities, Investors in this offering who do not participate in those other securities issuances will experience dilution in their percentage ownership of the Company's outstanding securities. Furthermore, Investors may experience a dilution in the value of their interests depending on the terms and pricing of any future Securities issuances (including the Securities being sold in this Offering) and the value of the Company's assets at the time of issuance.

Investors will not have any rights to vote on issues affecting the Company, nor manage the Company. The Managing Member has full responsibility for managing our Company. The Investors will not be entitled to participate in the management or operation of the Company or in the conduct of its business. The Investors may not vote their securities in the election of the Company's Managing Member or for any other reason.

Risks Related to Real Estate

Our performance and the value of our Interests are subject to risks associated with the real estate industry. If any assets do not generate income sufficient to pay our expenses and maintain any assets acquired by the Company, we may not be able to make expected distributions to our Investors. Several factors may adversely affect the economic performance and value of our Investments. These factors include but are not limited to changes in the national, regional and local economic climate, local conditions such as an oversupply of multi-family properties or a reduction in demand for such properties, the attractiveness of our Investments to tenants, competition from other available real estate properties, changes in market rental rates and the need to periodically repair, renovate and re-rent space. In addition, the expenses of owning and operating real property are not necessarily reduced when circumstances such as market factors and competition cause a reduction in income from real property. If any real property is mortgaged and the Company is unable to meet the mortgage payments, a lender could foreclose on the mortgage and take said real property. In addition, interest rate levels, the availability of financing, changes in laws and governmental regulations (including those governing usage, zoning and taxes) and the possibility of bankruptcies of tenants may adversely affect our financial condition and results of operations.

Operating Risks. The Company's financial performance is based, in part, upon controlling and minimizing operating expenses. However, certain expenses, such as taxes and insurance, cannot be controlled. A material increase in costs could have a material adverse effect on operating cash flow. If costs exceed revenues, additional funds would be required to satisfy such operating deficits. No assurances can be given that such funds will be available on satisfactory terms, if at all. Neither the Company nor the Managing Member can assure that assumptions or predictions as to the future levels of income or future operating costs will be accurate, since many of these predictions are premised upon matters beyond the control of the Company.

Because real estate investments are illiquid, we may not be able to sell any real property when appropriate or necessary. Real estate investments generally cannot be sold quickly. We may not be able to vary our portfolio promptly in response to economic or other conditions to meet our financing needs. This inability to respond promptly to changes in the performance of our investments could adversely affect our financial condition, results of operations and ability to make distributions to members. The Company may not be able to sell its assets, and if assets are sold, members of the Company may not realize appreciation on their investment. There can be no assurance of when the Company's assets will, in fact, be sold or the terms of any such sale. A number of years ago, the real estate industry experienced a significant downturn, which resulted in significantly reduced demand and higher inventories of real estate properties. Market conditions such as these may adversely affect the ability of the Company to sell its assets within the desired timeframe or on desirable terms. The price that can be obtained on the sale of a Company asset will depend on many factors that are presently unknown, including the operating history, tax treatment of the investment, demographic trends in the area and available financing. There is a risk that the Company may not realize any significant appreciation on its investment in any Company asset. Accordingly, an investor's ability to recover all or any portion of its investment under such circumstances will depend on the amount of funds so realized and claims to be satisfied therefrom.

Because our investments will be subject to local, state, and federal laws, we may have additional expenses. There are laws which currently exist or may exist which could negatively affect the operations of the Company and any real property acquired.

We will operate in a highly competitive environment. The real estate industry is highly competitive. We will compete with major local, regional and national real estate companies and real estate investment funds, many of which may have greater financial, marketing and management resources than we do. In addition, other companies may enter the real estate investment and development markets. Competition in the type of business that we will operate is based on many factors. Increased competition could result in fewer development and investment opportunities, which could adversely impact our growth and profitability. We cannot predict the extent to which competition from new companies or existing competitors raising capital could mitigate the investment and management opportunities and favorable market conditions that we believe currently exist.

Environmental problems are possible and may be costly. Federal, state and local laws and regulations relating to the protection of the environment may require a current or previous owner or operator of real estate to investigate and clean up hazardous or toxic substances, petroleum product releases, lead based paint, or mold at any real property. The owner or operator may have to pay a governmental entity or third parties for real property damage and for investigation and clean-up costs incurred by such parties in connection with the contamination. Such laws typically impose clean-up responsibility and liability without regard to whether the owner or operator knew of or caused the presence of the contaminants. Even if more than one person may have been responsible for the contamination, each person covered by the environmental laws may be held responsible for all of the clean-up costs incurred. In addition, third parties may sue the owner or operator of a site for damages and costs resulting from environmental contamination emanating from that site. Environmental laws also govern the presence, maintenance and removal of asbestos. Such laws require that owners or operators of buildings containing asbestos properly manage and maintain the asbestos that they notify and train those who may come into contact with asbestos and that they undertake special precautions, including removal or other abatement, if asbestos would be disturbed during the renovation or demolition of a building. Such laws may impose fines and penalties on building owners or operators who fail to comply with these requirements and may allow third parties to seek recovery from owners or operators for personal injury associated with exposure to asbestos fibers. In addition such laws could operate to limit or prevent entirely the development of any real property, in which case the Company would suffer losses.

Some potential losses may not be covered by insurance. We plan to carry customary and reasonable insurance on any real property acquired. We expect that the policy specifications and insured limits of these policies will be adequate and appropriate. There are, however, certain types of losses, such as sinkhole, terrorism, earthquake, lease and other contract claims, and other claims that generally are not insured. Should an uninsured loss or a loss in excess of insured limits occur, we could lose all or a portion of the capital we have invested in any real property, as well as the anticipated future revenue from the Property. In such an event, we might nevertheless remain obligated for any mortgage debt or other financial obligation related to the Property. This could result in all or part of the investments in the Company being lost.

Any debt financing we obtain to finance or refinance any real property presents risks to the Company. The Company may employ leverage in connection with its operations and investments. The use of leverage involves a high degree of financial risk and may increase the exposure of the Company or its investments to factors such as rising interest rates, downturns in the economy or deterioration in the condition of subject real property. Principal and interest payments on any indebtedness of the Company would have to be made when they become due and payable regardless of whether sufficient cash is available.

No Assurance of Investment Return. The Company's investment portfolio will consist of the Property, and operating results in a specified period will be difficult to predict. Additionally, fluctuations in the real estate market make the potential sales prices and rental rates of any certain multifamily real estate Property difficult to predict. Thus, there is no assurance that the Company will be able to generate returns for its investors.

Clear Title to the Property. The Company intends to acquire the Property with generally clear title, excluding non-delinquent property taxes, easements of record, and matters which a survey of the Property would disclose, as well as any mortgages intended to finance the Company's acquisition of the Property. There is no guarantee, however, that if the Company purchases any multi-family properties that the Company's title will actually be clear in the manner described above. Although it is likely but not certain that any lender would require a title insurance policy to be issued prior to the lending of any funds to purchase multi-family properties, it is not certain that a lender would require such a policy. Even if a title search occurs, and title insurance obtained by any lender, it is still possible that a mistake could be made which results in an unknown title defect after the Property is purchased, which could prevent the Company from refinancing, borrowing, or disposing of the Property in a manner and at a time it would otherwise choose, resulting in losses for the Company. In addition, the Company does not intend at present to purchase title insurance policies for its benefit, although the Managing Member may do so at its sole discretion. If title is not clear, it could either make difficult or impossible the ability of the Company to refinance or sell the Property in the future, meaning that a loss of all or part of any investment could result.

FINANCIAL INFORMATION

Please see the financial information listed on the cover page of this Form C and attached hereto in addition to the following information. Financial statements are attached hereto as Exhibit A.

OTHER MATERIAL INFORMATION

Conflicts of Interest

The Managing Member and its owners, officers, directors, employees, agents, contractors, subcontractors, and other related parties (hereinafter, “Affiliates”) may act, and are acting, as the managers, members, and owners, of other limited liability companies or equivalent roles. The Managing Member and its Affiliates may form and manage additional limited liability companies and may have additional responsibilities to those entities. As a result, conflicts of interest between the Company, the Managing Member, and/or the Investors may occur from time to time. The main areas where conflicts may be anticipated to occur are described below, but not limited to these areas.

1. Obligations to Other Entities. Conflicts of interest will occur with respect to the obligations of the Managing Member and its Affiliates, Principals, and Significant Members, and other entities related to the Company and similar obligations to other entities. Moreover, the Company will not have independent management, as it will rely on the Managing Member and its Affiliates for all its management decisions. Other investment projects in which the Managing Member and its Affiliates participate may compete with the Company for the time and resources of the Managing Member and its Affiliates. The Managing Member will, therefore, have conflicts of interest in allocating management time, services and functions among the Company and other existing partnerships, projects and businesses, as well as any partnerships, projects or business entities which may be undertaken or organized in the future. Under the Operating Agreement, the Managing Member is obligated to devote as much time as it, in its sole discretion, deems to be reasonably required for the proper management of the Company and its assets. The Managing Member believes that it has the capacity to discharge its responsibilities to the Company notwithstanding participation in other investment programs and projects.
2. Competition by the Company with Other Entities or Affiliates for Management Services. The principals of the Company will have conflicts of interest in allocating management time, services and functions among other partnerships in which it may be involved, the Company and any future partnerships and other entities which may be organized by it. The principals of the Company believe that it has sufficient staff to be fully capable of discharging its responsibilities to the Company.
3. Allocation of Services and Costs. A conflict may exist in the employment of certain personnel who may have supervisory responsibility for projects managed by the principals of the Company and for other owners. Similar conflicts may exist with respect to the purchasing of services (such as bookkeeping, accounting, tax preparation, legal, computer and other accounting equipment or personnel) to the extent that the Company attempts to achieve economies by combining the resources of various projects.
4. Acquisition of Other Property. The Managing Member and/or its principals may form additional limited liability companies and other entities in the future to engage in activities similar to and with the same investment objectives as those of the Company.

The Managing Member may be engaged in sponsoring other such entities at approximately the same time as the Company's securities are being offered or its investments are being made. These activities may cause conflicts of interest between such activities and the Company, and the duties of the Managing Member concerning such activities and the Company. The Managing Member will attempt to minimize any conflicts of interest that may arise among these various activities.

5. Receipt of Compensation by the Managing Member and its Affiliates. Payments to the Managing Member and its Affiliates may not have been determined by arm's length negotiations. The Managing Member and its Affiliates will receive compensation pursuant to agreements that will be negotiated on behalf of the Company by the Managing Member and there will not be any independent valuation of such compensation. As a result, the Managing Member will determine its own compensation and the Members will not have approval rights for such compensation.
6. Ownership of Interests by Managing Member and its Affiliates. The Managing Member and its Affiliates may purchase Interests. The principals of the Managing Member and their affiliates may also purchase units in other partnerships with which they are affiliated. Conflicts of interest may arise in the course of the operations of the Company as a result of such ownership of Interests. The principals of the Managing Member and their affiliates may be purchasing real property or interests in other entities which are engaged in purchasing similar real property
7. Lack of Separate Representation. The Company and the Managing Member, have not been represented by separate counsel in connection with the formation of the Company, drafting the Operating Agreement, or the offering of the Interests. The attorneys and other experts who perform services for the Company all perform similar services for affiliates of the Managing Member and it is contemplated that such multiple representation will continue in the future. Each Investor acknowledges and agrees that counsel representing the Company, the Managing Member and its Affiliates does not represent and will not be deemed under the applicable codes of professional responsibility to have represented or to be representing any or all of the Investors in any respect.
8. Transactions by Certain Persons. The principals of the Company, the Managing Member and its Affiliates are not restricted from acquiring properties and engaging in other real estate activities which may be in competition with the Company. The Investors, as a result of their investment in the Company, will not participate in any such activities, partnerships or syndicates, nor in any income or profits derived therefrom.
9. Distribution of Investor Interests by Managing Member. There is no independent underwriter engaged for the placement of the Interests. Therefore, the value of the Interests and the compensation of the Managing Member have not been determined at arm's length and the placement will not receive the independent review accompanied by an underwriting.
