Net Interest Margin

- During 2016, net interest margin (NIM) was impacted by:
 - Increased funding costs associated with a higher proportion of Federal Home Loan Bank medium-term borrowings and lower earning asset yields
 - Average loan rates declined due to the low interest rate environment, lower spreads on existing loan repricing, and competitive new loan pricing
- NIM has shown stability and improvement over last few quarters from combination of balance sheet remix strategy and the YCB acquisition
 - Positioned for asset sensitivity in a rising interest rate environment
 - Continued loan growth and balance sheet remix strategy will, over time, improve asset yields as average loan rates are higher than securities rates
 - Competitive pressures continue on loan pricing and non-pricing terms

Interest Rate Sensitivity

- Positioned for asset sensitivity in rising rate shock and ramp environments

Immediate Change in Interest Rates	Change in Net Interest Income from Base over One Year

 - Growth in electronic banking and deposit fees from a larger customer deposit base from the addition of the new Indiana and Kentucky markets
 - Trust fees improved year-over-year from the improvement in equity markets and higher trust assets
