Questions and Answers Regarding the Annual Meeting

What if I submit my proxy but do not vote for one or more of the proposals?, page 3

1. We note your statement that brokers have discretionary authority to vote such shares held in street name on routine matters, but not on non-routine matters, and that broker non-votes will be counted for quorum purposes. We note that according to the participants' proxy statement, brokers will not have discretionary authority to vote shares and that broker non-votes will not be counted towards a quorum. Please revise to reconcile the inconsistencies and also clarify whether brokers will have discretionary authority to vote with respect to each of the matters in the company's proxy statement. Please also advise us as to how the company made its determination regarding broker discretionary authority. Please address this in your response, or revise your disclosure as necessary.
