Shell Canada Executive Announcement

Calgary, Alberta - Shell Canada announces that Brian Straub will be appointed Senior Vice President, Oil Sands effective October 1, 2005. He will succeed Neil Camarta who has led Shell's Oil Sands division since 1996.

Mr. Straub grew up in Alberta and joined Shell Canada in 1977 with a Petroleum Engineering degree from the University of Wyoming. His career has included roles in drilling and operations as well as technical and commercial management positions in Shell Canada's exploration and production (E&P) business. Brian has also worked with Royal Dutch Shell's global E&P organization on a number of senior assignments overseas and for the last two years has been Regional Technical Director, Asia Pacific.

Clive Mather, Shell Canada's President and CEO, said "I am delighted to welcome Brian back to Shell Canada at a time of great opportunity for oil sands. The strong foundation for this business has been laid by Neil Camarta who has been at the heart of Shell Canada's oil sands project from the beginning. His vision and achievements have been outstanding. Developed under Neil's leadership, the oil sands business is contributing significantly to the success of the Company today and will be a key part of our future. Neil will be taking up an important new assignment later this year, which will be confirmed prior to the handover to Brian Straub in the fall."
