Prospectus Summary, page 1

1. Your responses to prior comments 1 and 2 indicate that you reduce double-counting of registered users and reduce fraud by imposing a limit of five points-generating accounts per device and a limit of 6,000 points per day per user. Please revise to clarify that users may nevertheless establish multiple accounts on several different devices and generate duplicative points. At page 10 or elsewhere clarify whether you are aware of such practices or have sought to determine the extent of such practices. To the extent known, please provide quantitative and qualitative data regarding the extent to which your figures may be inflated to due to users with unauthorized multiple accounts.

Liquidity and Capital Resources, page 19

2. With respect to prior comments 5 and 6, the basis for the belief you will generate sufficient revenue to cover rewards' costs is unclear. In generating $560,000 in revenue, you spent $3.2 million on associated rewards through March 31, 2012. Please explain whether that historical revenue-to-rewards ratio is expected to be consistent with operations in next 12 months. If a different revenue-to-reward ratio is anticipated, explain why and discuss the conditions or uncertainties that may cause the actual ratio to vary from your expectations. Indicate whether you expect to offer the same rewards per user at unchanged rates. Please address the possible effects changes in the rate of rewards may have on membership growth.

3. In response to prior comment 8, you list Audible Magic as another competitor that does not offer reward programs. Please revise to compare and contrast Audible Magic's patented fingerprinting technology with your fingerprinting technology. With a view to disclosure, describe the barriers to entry into your business and the risks to your business posed by possible licensing by potential competitors of similar fingerprinting technology to compete with the Viggle network.

4. You completed an unregistered offering to accredited and institutional investors on May 10, 2012. Please clarify whether there was a pre-existing relationship with the investors and describe how they became aware of this investment opportunity.
