WHAT VENTAS WANTS INVESTORS TO BELIEVE IS HIGHLY MISLEADING

CORRECTING THE RECORD, IT APPEARS THAT:

- Ventas wants investors to believe it has performed similarly – or even better – than its closest peer Welltower (WELL), which is misleading at best given Ventas’ consistent and persistent total shareholder return (TSR) underperformance, normalized FFO/share growth underperformance and massively deteriorating relative valuation
- Ventas wants investors to believe it has performed similarly – or even better – than the NAREIT healthcare index, but the Company is forced to cherry-pick dates over the past decade to make the comparison as favorable as they can
- Ventas wants investors to believe it’s a beat and raise story, while ignoring the years of downward earnings estimate revisions as the Company continually walked back future growth projections
- Ventas wants investors to believe sell-side analysts are highly supportive of Company management, capital allocation, and communication, but even a curated collection of analyst quotes can only show lukewarm support
- Ventas wants investors to believe it has a “thoughtful” Board refreshment process ongoing, but upon closer look it’s clear the Board has a two-tier structure with recently elected directors having limited power, including committee assignments
- Ventas wants investors to believe that Land & Buildings is unreasonable and does not have a plan – in reality Land & Buildings has continually sought out a collaborative solution, including outreach to the Company last week, and has laid out a 4-pronged plan to restore Ventas to blue-chip status
- Ventas wants investors to believe Jonathan Litt is not qualified to be a Company director, when the truth is he is uniquely qualified given decades of leadership in the REIT sector as both a top-rated analyst and leading engaged investor

WHAT VENTAS DID NOT RESPOND TO

WHAT THE COMPANY SEEMINGLY FAILED TO ADDRESS IS MOST TELLING:

Source: Land & Buildings, SEC filings

VTR VS. WELL – A DISINGENUOUS DEFENSE

Ventas is not disputing Welltower (WELL) as its closest peer, but appears to be selectively deciding when to compare itself to WELL

Ventas and Its Largest Competitor Experienced Similar COVID Headwinds, With Ventas Leading the Rebound

Indexed Normalized FFO per Share – 1Q16 to 4Q21⁽¹⁾

Virtually identical FFO per share path since Ventas's spin-off of CCP in 2015

Since pre-pandemic (Q4'19 to Q4'21), Ventas normalized FFO per share down (22%) vs. Welltower down (21%)

Land & Buildings's FFO Analysis

- Land & Buildings mislabels its VTR-WELL 10-year FFO comparison as a "trailing" view but uses forward-looking 2022E consensus estimates, rather than 2021 actual results
- Land & Buildings also failed to account for Ventas' spin-off of Care Capital Properties (CCP)
 - 2015 separation of $4.5bn enterprise value business; materially affects the base in the 10-year FFO comparison
- When correcting for these two errors, Ventas's normalized FFO per share has performed in-line with or ahead of Welltower during the period
 - 20pp better over 10-year time horizon

Strong Recent SHOP Results

4Q21 Same-Store NOI Growth⁽²⁾

Ventas meaningfully outperformed Welltower in SHOP in Q4'21, with fundamentals infecting upward as pandemic abates

Land & Buildings uses actual results in its earnings analysis prior to 2022 and uses consensus estimates for 2022 growth – this is not an “error” to be fixed in our view but an intentional illustration of the Company's continued inferior performance and lack of earnings growth despite powerful industry-wide senior housing momentum

Ventas' focus on only the most recent quarter of senior housing operating (SHOP) results after badly underperforming in prior periods is highly telling

Ventas cannot have its cake and eat it too – the fact that the Company has adjusted for its spin-off of CCP in 2015, but does not adjust for similar restructurings by its peers – including the nearly ~$4 billion in WELL dispositions in 2015/2016 – is misleading in our view

CHERRY-PICKING TIME PERIOD AND PEER SET

Ventas' TSR badly underperformed prior to COVID-19 – using COVID as a shield against underperformance is a stretch

Ventas's Long-Term TSR Outperformance, With Recent TSR Leading the Recovery; In-Line Medium-Term TSR Impacted by Pandemic

Total Shareholder Return

Ventas ignores a direct comparison to Welltower, despite acknowledging WELL as its closest peer for comparison as seen on the prior page

Ventas ignores the unaffected date and uses TSR performance following Land & Buildings' first public engagement, claiming the 12% subsequent advance in the shares as completely their own, and seemingly cherry-picking a March 25, 2022 end date (when the shares peaked on a relative basis)

The Company talked down forward estimates/guidance consistently, taking credit for beating significantly lowered expectations is a hollow victory

We believe the perpetual estimate declines speaks volumes about the inability of the Company to effectively communicate about guidance

EARNINGS ESTIMATES HAVE CONSISTENTLY BEEN REDUCED

EARNINGS ESTIMATES HAVE FALLEN MATERIALLY EACH YEAR BEGINNING IN 2016

- Analysts rely on company assumptions/commentary, and peer performance to forecast earnings and VTR has consistently missed expectations
- CEO Cafaro in response to analyst questions about the troubling trend of earnings estimates declines stated, "I can't account for your business, for you and your colleagues." March 7, 2022

UNIMPRESSIVE CURATED ANALYST COMMENTARY

Just because a management team is “battle-tested”, doesn’t mean it’s the “right team” in our view

This capital allocation quote simply says the Company “shifted its portfolio recently”, not that these investments were the rights ones

Analysts Recognize Our Progress and Momentum

Ventas has the right team...

“Ventas has a battle-tested management team, with a high-quality, diversified portfolio. As COVID fades, we have gained increased conviction in the senior housing recovery with accelerating demographic driven demand and moderate supply. External growth accretion should also improve with a stronger cost of capital.”
– BMO Capital Markets, 11 March 2022

... taking the right actions...

“The company shifted its portfolio recently, expanding MOB and Life Science assets, restructuring senior living, exiting skilled nursing and growing the third-party management business, all of which were enhanced by the $3.7 billion investments in 2021.”
– Stifel, 7 March 2022

... and clearly communicating...

“We are upgrading VTR... Our upgrade reflects our positive outlook on accelerating senior housing fundamentals. We like VTR’s expanded disclosures and change to how it reports earnings (post market close).”
– Bank of America, 11 March 2022

“While ultimately execution will be the main driver of performance going forward – we commend VTR on its improved disclosure and earnings release format, which will help the investment community better understand and analyze the business.”
– Citi, 17 February 2022

While disclosures are historically poor and need enhancement, improving disclosures is not the primary communication issue to solve in our view

... to capture the upside of the market recovery and drive shareholder value

“We continue to believe VTR is well positioned to benefit from the ongoing seniors housing recovery that should drive strong, accelerating earnings growth in 2022 and 2023 ... However, the seniors housing recovery should accelerate in the Spring / Summer offset by elevated operating expense pressures that should moderate in 2H22 and 2023.”
– RBC Capital Markets, 8 March 2022

“With estimates largely reset, we continue to see attractive upside in the stock (without needing to assume the multiple discount to peers returns to historical levels) through (1) improved pricing power and robust lead volumes; (2) lower contract labor usage/cost potentially serving as a deflationary offset to rising expenses; and (3) the fragmented industry continuing to provide accretive acquisition opportunities.”
– Baird, 15 December 2021

“We walked away from 4Q with greater conviction in SHOP’s recovery with stronger-than-expected pricing helping offset agency cost pressures that should moderate.”
– BMO Capital Markets, 11 March 2022

“VTR is a longer-term value play on senior housing – with upside in its operating segment via REVPOR growth. This is balanced by ongoing strength in its life science segment and steady MOB business.”
– Mizuho, 20 January 2022

We certainly agree there is substantial opportunity in VTR stock, but these quote make it clear to us analysts are betting on the senior housing industry-wide upside, not Ventas-specific actions

- Melody Barnes as new Chair of Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee as of 2022 AGM

A BOARD IN NEED OF REAL CHANGE AND REFRESHMENT

DEEP SEATED ISSUES ARE APPARENT IN THE VENTAS BOARDROOM

- 5 directors with tenure over 10 years
 - Ventas' total shareholder return, earnings growth and valuation underperformance has been concentrated in prior 10 years
- The 3 most recently elected directors appear to be relegated to second-tier status
 - None of these directors serve on powerful committees such as the Executive Committee, Investment Committee or Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee
 - Each is a member of just one committee while every other director is on two or three committees
 - None of these directors chair any committees
 - Conversely, Michael Embler, the Company's recent hand-picked new Director, has two committee assignments, including the Investment Committee

LAND & BUILDINGS HAS OFFERED VALUE-ENHANCING IDEAS AND CONSISTENTLY SOUGHT A CONSTRUCTIVE SOLUTION

Land & Buildings has offered a 4-pronged, detailed approach to restoring Ventas to blue-chip status – the substance of which was repeatedly discussed with the Company over the past roughly 4 months

Since Campaign Began In November 2021, L&B Has Offered No Substantive Ideas to Drive Value For All Ventas Shareholders

Land & Buildings has attempted multiples times to restart a constructive dialogue, including in early April when Mr. Litt reached out to CEO Cafaro, but was rebuffed and offered no concessions other than a repayment of expenses

WHAT JONATHAN LITT WOULD DO FROM DAY ONE

COLLABORATE WITH THE BOARD TO HELP RESTORE VENTAS TO ITS BLUE-CHIP STATUS

Capital allocation discipline

Repair investor communications

Internal growth acceleration

Governance reinvigorated

LANDandBUILDINGS

www.CureVentas.com

48

CURING VENTAS: CAPITAL ALLOCATION

LITT WOULD WORK WITH CURRENT BOARD TO HELP INSTALL ENHANCED CAPITAL ALLOCATION DISCIPLINE AND CREATIVITY

- Ventas' large public debt load appears to be on its way to being resolved (e.g., MHC, HCT, ENX), particularly relative to private market debt that was fairly available
- Mr. Litt would immediately add a shareholder's perspective to the process of evaluating the best uses of capital, bringing a rigor and conservatism which clearly has been lacking in recent years

- Evaluate sales or spin-offs of certain property types and asset classes
 - Mr. Litt would provide a fresh viewpoint on which assets are continuing to drag on Ventas' earnings, or where the market is overvaluing certain properties
 - It is always challenging for a board to move away from or cut losses from a deal that it approved – but this is exactly why a truly objective perspective would benefit shareholders

CURING VENTAS: REPAIRING INVESTOR COMMUNICATIONS

IMPROVING THE INCONSISTENT MESSAGING THAT HAS HURT INVESTOR CONFIDENCE

- Specific, straightforward commentary and outlook
 - Mr. Litt would advocate from the Board level that management begin communicating in a more transparent way that resonates with investors and leaves less room for misinterpretation or misstep

- Clear communication with analysts to avoid continued downward estimate revisions and negative surprises
 - The relationship between Ventas and a portion of the sell-side community has become challenged and characterized by animosity
 - As a former long-time analyst, Mr. Litt can help improve the dialogue with the Company's analysts – which will benefit management and all shareholders

- Reinstall confidence in Company, repair credibility, and reestablish Ventas as a best and value company
 - As Ventas navigates full-year guidance coming out of COVID-19, the opportunity exists to reestablish the Company as one that is able to consistently exceed expectations from the financial community, a best and value company

CURING VENTAS: INTERNAL GROWTH ACCELERATION

INSTALLING ENHANCED CAPITAL ALLOCATION DISCIPLINE AND CREATIVITY

- Work closely with existing senior housing operators to capture substantial upside following material underperformance
 - The data is clear that there is a disconnect between the actual performance of Ventas' senior housing assets and their potential given the high quality and attractive locations
 - From the outside, it is always difficult to diagnose the specific operational failings, but this is a pivotal moment in the cycle to capture all available upside and all hands need to be on deck to ensure that improvement, including the fresh perspectives Jonathan Litt would bring to the boardroom

- Further diversify senior housing operator relationships
 - The new exposure to the senior housing operators has weighed on Ventas, with EEL being the most notable recent example
 - Further transitions of struggling assets and, more significantly, additional acquisitions with new operators or smaller existing operators should be prioritized

CURING VENTAS: GOVERNANCE INVIGORATED

INSTALLING ENHANCED CAPITAL ALLOCATION DISCIPLINE AND CREATIVITY

- Elect Jonathan Litt to Board and appoint to Investment Committee
 - It is clear to us that an investor representative is needed not just on the Board, but on the powerful Investment Committee
 - As described previously, we believe Mr. Litt's presence on the committee would help ensure that there is true shareholder alignment and at least one true shareholder voice weighing in on key investment decisions

- More robust refreshment process moving forward & shareholder-friendly governance practices
 - As noted by the Board's fiduciary appointment of Michael O'Brien, the Board's current refreshment approach is broken
 - The limited committee assignments and responsibilities of recently appointed directors shows a lack of commitment to true refreshment
 - Given the number of long-tenured directors, the Board should initiate a real refreshment process that can be focused on identifying the best individuals available for the future of the Company and shareholders – not who is available quickly and fits the criteria of a "Land & Building Veteran"
 - Mr. Litt would seek to push for more shareholder-friendly governance provisions, such as the ability for shareholders to call special meetings and the removal of the supermajority vote requirement to amend the Bylaws

- bolster senior leadership roles with experienced executives across senior housing, real estate investing, and investor relations
 - Currently the depth of the senior management team below Mr. Cafaro is concerning – which is something we have heard repeatedly in our conversations with other large investors
 - We believe a process would be put in place to strengthen leadership, particularly in key roles where the Company's track record with investors is less than stellar
