Note 19. Differences Between Canadian and United States Generally Accepted Accounting Principles

1. We note your response to comment two and four of our letter dated September 10, 2009. Pursuant to paragraph 23 of SFAS 141, quoted market prices in active markets are the best evidence of fair value and shall be used as the basis for the measurement of the fair value of a reporting unit, if available. Additionally, a control premium may cause the fair value of a reporting unit to exceed its market capitalization. Thus, the quoted market price of an individual equity security need not be the sole measurement basis of the fair value of a reporting unit. We believe that declines in market capitalization are likely indicative of factors you should consider in your determination of fair value. Your response that the decrease in market capitalization is a temporary situation as a result of the recent global economic crisis does not support the propriety of your conclusion that fair value of your reporting unit under the discounted cash flow methodology is greater than your market capitalization. Please address the following:

- Provide us with evidence that supports the reasons that give rise to the difference between your market capitalization and valuation under the discounted cash flow model.
- Provide us with your discounted cash flow valuation analyses as of February 28, 2009.
- Explain to us the bases for the key assumptions used in your valuation, and quantify the reasons why the projected cash flows differ from your historical results.
- Explain to us how the estimated reporting unit fair value exceeded its carrying value when the company's historical earnings and operating cash flows have been negative and your projections employ a decrease in gross revenue and a zero percentage cash flow growth rate.

2. We note your response to comment three of our letter dated September 10, 2009. It appears your proposed disclosure is already included on page 28 of Form 20-F. We requested you disclose the variability in the estimated reporting unit fair value attributable to your discounted cash flow projections. Please expand your disclosure to explain:

- Your conclusion that there is one reporting unit;
- A description of the key assumptions that drive your fair value estimates; and
- A discussion of the uncertainty associated with the key assumptions and any potential events and/or circumstances that could have a negative effect.

3. We note that you present non-GAAP measures of gross profit margin (before discounts and slotting fees) and EBITDA before non-cash stock based compensation. Please tell us why you present these two measures and describe to us their usefulness to you. In addition, provide us with your analysis of Section (c) of Regulation G in determining whether the provisions of Regulation G apply to your disclosures.
