

STARBOARD RESPONDS TO DARDEN'S ANNOUNCED NEW SLATE OF DIRECTOR NOMINEES FOR ELECTION AT 2014 ANNUAL MEETING

Believes Darden's Reactive, Last-Minute Decision to Delay the Annual Meeting and Propose a New Slate is Just Another Poorly Conceived and Suboptimal Solution

Reiterates that Starboard's Cohesive Slate of Highly Qualified Nominees Represents by far the Best Outcome for Darden Shareholders, with the Best Mix of Complementary Skill Sets and a Comprehensive Turnaround Plan to Create Value for the Benefit for all Shareholders

Dismisses Company's Claims that Election is about "Control" – Believes Election Should Focus on which Board Slate Is Best for the Company and its Shareholders

Provides Case Study on Recent Majority Change in Board Composition of Tessera Technologies, including a Published Quotation from the Chairman of the Board

Urges Shareholders to Vote the WHITE Proxy Card Today to Support Starboard's Slate of 12 Highly Qualified Director Nominees

NEW YORK, NY – September 3, 2014 – Starboard Value LP (together with its affiliates, "Starboard"), one of the largest shareholders of Darden Restaurants, Inc. ("Darden" or the "Company") (NYSE:DRI), with beneficial ownership of approximately 8.8% of the outstanding common stock of the Company, today issued a response to Darden's announcement that it has nominated a new slate of director candidates for election to the Company's Board of Directors (the "Board") at the upcoming 2014 Annual Meeting of Shareholders (the "Annual Meeting").

Starboard believes that Darden's reactionary, last-minute, confused decision to once again shuffle its proposed slate of director nominees further demonstrates our belief that this Board is lacking leadership and flailing without direction.

Starboard believes the Company's argument that its slate of four incumbents, along with four new nominees, ensures "continuity" and prevents Starboard from "taking control" of Darden without paying a premium are misguided and further demonstrates the current Board's inability to view the Company from the perspective of a shareholder. First, ten of Starboard's nominees are completely unaffiliated with Starboard, and most of these nominees had no relationship with Starboard prior to Starboard's search for independent director nominees. Starboard's nominees are highly qualified and experienced individuals who have committed to acting in the best interests of all Darden shareholders. Compared to the Company's hastily constructed slate, Starboard believes that its slate is significantly more qualified and far more likely to create substantial shareholder value. Second, any value that is created through better oversight and the implementation of Starboard's transformation plan, which Starboard intends to release next week assuming that the Company does not further delay the Annual Meeting, will benefit all Darden shareholders equally in proportion to their ownership. While Darden's incumbent directors may think of "control" as simply a matter of who occupies the board room, shareholders understand that they, not the Board, are the owners of Darden and that the board is elected to represent their interests – the Annual Meeting is about electing the best possible board.

The hollow argument that Darden is now trying to make is the same stale argument that has been made before by companies in similar situations. It has been proven false. As one example, just last year, Starboard replaced a majority of the board of Tessera Technologies, Inc. ("Tessera"). The new board implemented a comprehensive turnaround plan which has created substantial value for all shareholders. Tessera's stock price has outperformed the market by 39% and approximately doubled its enterprise value since the board change just 15 months ago. During the election contest, Tessera made the same arguments that Darden is now trying to make, but shareholders saw through them and supported majority change to the board. In fact, in a recent statement, Rick Hill, who was the incumbent Chairman during the election contest and who is still Chairman of Tessera, acknowledged the direct and positive impact of Starboard's majority slate:

"I can now unequivocally say that Tessera is better off with Starboard's involvement and greatly appreciate the professionalism with which Starboard approached the board transition and overall stewardship of Tessera. This has had a direct and positive impact on our overall results and tremendous value has been created for the benefit of all Tessera shareholders and employees."

A case study of the Tessera situation and Mr. Hill's full statement is attached hereto as an appendix.

In addition, Starboard believes that its proposed solution, first disclosed in its preliminary proxy materials on August 14, 2014, which would include adding back up to two of the incumbent Board members if all 12 of Starboard's nominees are elected, represents a far better outcome for shareholders, as it would ensure continuity while putting in place the best board possible for the benefit of all shareholders.

Starboard has nominated a cohesive group of supremely qualified director nominees with diverse and complementary skill sets specifically selected for their relevance to Darden's businesses and its current challenges. Starboard's slate includes not only experienced restaurant operators, but also experts in real estate, finance, turnarounds, supply chain, and, critically, effective public company governance and executive compensation. Notably, among Starboard's director nominees are several world-class executives with direct experience successfully leading Olive Garden during its most successful period or overseeing similar turnarounds at competing casual dining companies such as Brinker International. These nominees have been working together for an extended period, along with one of the world's leading operationally-focused consulting firms and a group of highly experienced advisors, to develop a comprehensive plan to transform Darden for the benefit of all shareholders, which Starboard plans to release in the next few weeks.

Unfortunately, Darden's latest ad hoc plan appears to be nothing more than a hurried, reactive attempt to try to manipulate the outcome of this election contest in response to what Starboard believes to be substantial shareholder frustration over the current Board's many value destructive and egregious actions. Of the four incumbent candidates who were re-nominated by Darden, three are on Darden's Compensation Committee, which, as Starboard has previously demonstrated, failed shareholders miserably by creating an incentive structure for management that Starboard believes encouraged reckless spending on growth, leading to excessive management compensation and the destruction of substantial shareholder value. In fact, Glass Lewis & Co., LLC ("Glass Lewis") has said, "[t]he Company has been deficient in linking executive pay to corporate performance ...[and] Shareholders should be concerned with this disconnect." Ultimately, Starboard believes skewed compensation practices played a role in the decision to sell Red Lobster at what Starboard believes was a "fire sale" price.

In addition, two of the incumbent nominees proposed by Darden are on the Nomination and Governance Committee (the "Governance Committee"), including Michael Rose as Chair. This is highly concerning given that Institutional Shareholder Services ("ISS") and Glass Lewis, the leading corporate governance and proxy advisory firms, have repeatedly lambasted Darden for its poor corporate governance practices, with ISS giving Darden its worst possible governance rating even before the Board's egregious decision to sell Red Lobster prior to holding a special meeting requested by the substantial majority of Darden's shareholders. Further, the Governance Committee recommended, and the Board appointed, Mr. Ledsinger as Chairman of the Board, and now, just one month later, has chosen not to re-nominate him for election to the Board at the Annual Meeting. We believe this demonstrates serious dysfunction in the board room and a total lack of leadership. Moreover, two of the incumbent nominees, Michael Rose and Maria Sastre, are the two longest tenured directors on Darden's Board, having served a combined 35 years, and bear significant responsibility for the severe value destruction at Darden.

Time is of the essence – the incumbent directors have already delayed much-needed change, including recently delaying the Annual Meeting, for far longer than is in the best interests of the Company and its shareholders. Now is not the time to play games with the election process in order to avoid accountability. The Annual Meeting is about electing the best possible board for Darden. Starboard believes that its slate of highly qualified nominees represents by far the best outcome for Darden shareholders, with the best mix of complementary skill sets, experience and perspectives directly relevant to Darden's business and current challenges. All of Starboard's nominees are fully committed to representing the best interests of all shareholders.

Appendix: Majority Board Change in Tessera Technologies

Starboard has demonstrated an ability to work constructively with incumbent directors when replacing the majority of a Board

While it is not everyday that shareholders are asked to replace the majority of an incumbent board, in exceptional circumstances, substantial change is necessary to preserve and create value for all shareholders.

- Last year, Starboard replaced the majority of the board of Tessera Technologies. Starboard's involvement directly resulted in substantial shareholder value creation.

THE ACTIVIST REPORT 13D Monitor

"On May 22, 2013, Starboard entered into a Settlement Agreement with Tessera Technologies, Inc. pursuant to which the six Starboard nominees, which included only one Starboard employee, would constitute a majority of the 10 person Board. One of the incumbent directors who remained on the Board was Rick Hill. Hill was Chairman of Tessera and by far the most vocal opponent of Starboard's involvement in Tessera. After being on the Tessera Board with Starboard for six months, Hill did a complete one-eighty and even agreed to be a member of Starboard's dissident slate at TriQuint Semiconductor. Since the Starboard slate went on the Board, the Company's stock has appreciated by 43.15% versus 16.22% for the S&P500."

TESSERA

In a recent statement, Tessera Chairman Rick Hill expressed his strong positive views on working with Starboard

"Shortly following my appointment to the board of Tessera in September 2013, Starboard served notice to Tessera desiring to replace a majority of the Board. Eventually, the Board agreed to accept the 6 proposed directors by Starboard and Starboard accepted four of the six directors serving on the Tessera Board. While proxy fights are unpleasant, it was clear that the course Tessera was following when I joined the Board could not continue. Having only joined the Board for one meeting prior to hearing from Starboard my instincts were "we could fix this ourselves". The facts are, we probably could have, but given the entrenchment of the former board the time to get results would have been much longer and not in the best interest of the shareholders.

During the proxy fight I had to balance my competitive instincts to win the proxy fight with the quickest path to sustainable shareholder value. Starboard brought to the table very independent minded qualified candidates for directors. None of their candidates were "their lackeys" but rather bright independent businessmen seeking to help the company succeed. For the last year I have served as Chairman of the Board and feel that I would work with any of these individuals anytime, anywhere. Today, Tessera is operating with a very cohesive board with people who only have the shareholders in mind. They, to a person, have integrated with the other Tessera board members without the slightest bit of acrimony.

I can now unequivocally say that Tessera is better off with Starboard's involvement and greatly appreciate the professionalism with which Starboard approached the board transition and overall stewardship of Tessera. This has had a direct and positive impact on our overall results and tremendous value has been created for the benefit of all Tessera shareholders and employees.

In my direct experience, Starboard has proven to be highly ethical and constructive in their approach to board oversight and governance and, without exception, has done whatever is best for the long-term interests of the company and its shareholders. They are challenging of ideas but respectful to all. Starboard comes to the table with knowledge, skills and ability. They do not come with an agenda."

- Rick Hill, Chairman of Tessera Technologies and former CEO of Novellus Systems
