IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT THE COMPANY'S INTEREST BEARING RETAINED ASSET ACCOUNT

Subject to state law conditions and requirements, full payment of the death benefit or proceeds ("Proceeds") to a beneficiary may be made into an interest bearing retained asset account that is backed by our general account. The retained asset account is not guaranteed by the FDIC. The beneficiary may access the entire Proceeds in the account at any time without penalty through a draftbook feature. The Company seeks to make a profit on the account, and interest credited on the account may vary from time to time but will not be less than the minimum rate stated in the supplemental contract delivered to the beneficiary together with the paperwork to make a claim to the Proceeds. Interest earned on the Proceeds in the account may be less than could be earned if the Proceeds were invested outside of the account. Likewise, interest credited on the Proceeds in the account may be less than under other settlement or payment options available through the Contract. A beneficiary should carefully review all settlement and payment options available under the Contract and are encouraged to consult with a financial professional or tax advisor before choosing a settlement or payment option.

A beneficiary may request additional information about the retained asset account and the draftbook feature or may elect to receive payment of the Proceeds by check rather than through the account's draftbook feature by contacting our ING Customer Service Center at P.O. Box 5033, Minot, ND 58702-5033, 1-877-886-5050 or www.ingservicecenter.com.

** Effective December 31, 2011, ING Investment Management Co. merged with and into ING Investment Management Co. LLC.

REGULATORY MATTERS

As with many financial services companies, the company and its affiliates periodically receive informal and formal requests for information from various state and federal governmental agencies and self-regulatory organizations in connection with inquiries and investigations of the products and practices of the company or the financial services industry. These currently include regulatory scrutiny of whether and to what extent insurance companies are using the United States Social Security Administration's Death Master File ("SSDMF") to proactively ascertain whether customers have deceased and to pay claims even where no claim for benefits has been made. Along these lines, the New York Department of Financial Services has directed the company to use information available on the SSDMF to identify any death claim that may be due under life insurance policies, annuity contracts or retained asset accounts that have not been previously reported through historical claim reporting processes, implement procedures to locate beneficiaries, make prompt payments as necessary, and to report to the New York Department of Financial Services the results of using the data. In addition, a majority of states are conducting an audit of the company's compliance with unclaimed property laws. The company also has been reviewing whether benefits are owed and whether reserves are adequate in instances where an insured appears to have died, but no claim for benefits has been made. Some of the investigations, audits, examinations, and inquiries could result in regulatory action against the company. The potential outcome of such action is difficult to predict but could subject the company to adverse consequences, including, but not limited to, additional payments to beneficiaries, settlement payments, penalties, fines, additional escheatment of funds deemed abandoned under state laws, changes to the company's procedures for the identification and escheatment of abandoned property, and other financial liability. While it is not possible to predict the ultimate outcome of any such action, or the internal and external investigations, examinations, reviews and inquiries, management does not believe that they will have a material adverse effect on the company's financial position. It is the practice of the company and its affiliates to cooperate fully in these matters.
