Re: FleetBoston Financial Corporation
Incoming letter dated November 30, 2001

Dear Ms. Liva:

This is in response to your letter dated November 30, 2001 concerning the shareholder proposal submitted to FleetBoston Financial Corp. by Mr. John Jennings Crapo. Our response is attached to the enclosed photocopy of your correspondence. By doing this, we avoid having to recite or summarize the facts set forth in the correspondence. Copies of all of the correspondence also will be provided to the proponent.

In connection with this matter, your attention is directed to the enclosure, which sets forth a brief discussion of the Division's informal procedures regarding shareholder proposals.

Sincerely,

Martin P. Dunn
Associate Director (Legal)

FleetBoston Financial Corporation (the "Corporation") received a letter, dated April 17, 2001 from Mr. John Jennings Crapo (the "Proponent") containing a stockholder proposal and supporting statement (collectively, the "Proposal" or the "2002 Proposal") and requesting that the Corporation submit the Proposal to the Corporation's 2002 Annual Meeting of Stockholders described below (the "2002 Annual Meeting").

We respectfully submit this letter, pursuant to Rule 14a-8(j) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act"), to request that the Division of Corporation Finance (the "Division") confirm that for the reasons stated below (i) the Proposal may properly be omitted from the proxy statement and form of proxy for the 2002 Annual Meeting (collectively, the "2002 Proxy Materials"); (ii) the Corporation may exclude any proposal made by the Proponent for inclusion in the proxy materials for any meetings of stockholders held in calendar years 2002 and 2003; (iii) the Division will not recommend any enforcement action to the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission") if the Proposal is omitted from the 2002 Proxy Materials; and (iv) the Division will not recommend any enforcement action to the Commission if any proposal made by the Proponent is omitted from the proxy materials for all stockholder meetings held in calendar years 2002 and 2003. A copy of the Proponent's letter of April 17, 2001 addressed to the Corporation and containing the Proposal as well as additional correspondence from the Proponent is attached hereto as Exhibit A and incorporated herein by reference.

Pursuant to Rule 14a-8(j)(2), enclosed herewith on behalf of the Corporation are six (6) additional copies of each of: (i) the Proposal and (ii) this letter, which sets forth the grounds on which the Corporation proposes to omit the Proposal from the 2002 Proxy Materials. A copy of this letter is also being sent to the Proponent as notice to him of the Corporation's intent to omit the Proposal from the 2002 Proxy Materials.

The Proposal

The Proposal, which has not been edited, is as follows:

Shareholder Proposal

Commencing the calendar year 2003 shareholder meetings of assembled shareholder and proxies meeting in Annual Meeting of shareholders of FleetBoston Financial Corporation ("Corporation") shall be held March Fifteenth except when said Fifteenth is a legal holiday or Saturday or Sunday when it shall be according to the choice of our Board of Directors on April 08th or February 08th or in event those days, too are legal holidays or Saturdays or Sunday the meeting shall be another date okay to said Board.

Supporting Statement

March 15th is the anniversary of the death of the author of the Julian Calendar who was a victim of by various senators of Rome who were envious Caesar's ability as Chief Executive Officer. The story is dramatized by the novelist Mr. William Shakspere who was patronized by the Right Honourable Earl of Southampton, an Englist MP.

April 08th is the anniversary when the Seventeenth Amendment USA Constitution (in 1913) was ratified and February 08th is anniversary when the State of Massachusetts notified said constitution.

March 15th was called to my attention by a Watertown (MA) letter of March 15 2001 which extolls the virtues of the Jehovah Witnesses Sect. Founded in USA by Mr. Charles Taze Russell of Family Values and Abstinence from Tobacco and Alcohol.

I. Reasons for Excluding the Proposal pursuant to Rule 14a-8(h)(3).

Pursuant to Rule 14a-8(h)(1), if a stockholder has submitted a proposal that has been included in a company's proxy materials, the stockholder or a qualified representative must attend the stockholders' meeting to present the proposal. Rule 14a-8(h)(3) states: "If you [the stockholder proponent] or your qualified representative fail to appear and present the proposal, without good cause, the company will be permitted to exclude all of your proposals from its proxy materials for any meetings held in the following two calendar years."

The Proponent submitted a proposal (the "2001 Proposal") which was included in the proxy materials (the "2001 Proxy Materials") for the Corporation's Annual Meeting of Stockholders in 2001 (the "2001 Annual Meeting"), which was held at the time and place set forth in the 2001 Proxy Materials, and neither the Proponent nor his representative appeared to present the 2001 Proposal at the 2001 Annual Meeting. The 2001 Proposal was therefore not presented to stockholders. The Corporation believes that because neither the Proponent nor his representative appeared to present the 2001 Proposal at the 2001 Annual Meeting, the Corporation may omit the 2002 Proposal from the 2002 Proxy Materials, and may omit any proposal made by the Proponent from the proxy materials for all stockholder meetings held in calendar years 2002 and 2003, under Rule 14a-8(h)(3). See CCBT Financial Companies, Inc. (December 12, 2000) (Division stated that its "no-action" response regarding Rule 14a-8(h)(3) would apply to any future submissions to the company by the same proponent with respect to any shareholder meetings held by the company in the two calendar years following the proponent's failure to appear and present his initial proposal.)

The Proponent, in his letter dated April 17, 2001, provides information suggesting that he attended a funeral on the day of the Annual Meeting. However, the Proponent gives no indication that failure to attend the 2001 Annual Meeting was due to his attending that funeral. The Proponent also provides no information to indicate that he took steps to have a representative present the Proposal at the meeting on his behalf. Since the Proponent choose not to personally attend the meeting, it was his responsibility to ensure that a representative appeared on his behalf and that the representative was adequately prepared to attend the meeting and to participate in the meeting. See Transamerica Inc. (December 27, 1989) ("While the proponent provides information to suggest that he had 'good cause' for such failure, there is no information to indicate that the proponent took steps to avoid such cause."). See also Sonat Inc. (January 6, 1994)). Previous no-action positions of the Division indicate that schedule conflicts and personal inconvenience are not "good cause" for purposes of Rule 14a-8(h)(3). See, e.g., the 1997 Eastman Chemical Letter and Tn-Continental Corporation (available March 4, 1996); Harnischfeger Industries, Inc. (December 15, 1992); and United States Steel Corporation (January 23, 1984).

Because the Proponent submitted the 2001 Proposal, which was included in the 2001 Proxy Materials, and neither the Proponent nor his representative (i) appeared to present the 2001 Proposal at the 2001 Annual Meeting, or (ii) demonstrated "good cause" for the failure to attend the 2001 Annual Meeting, the Corporation is entitled to exclude the 2002 Proposal from its 2002 Proxy Materials. Moreover, for the same reasons stated above, the Corporation is entitled to exclude any proposal made by the Proponent from the proxy materials for any meetings of stockholders held in calendar years 2002 and 2003.

On the basis of the Proponent's failure, without good cause, to present the 2001 Proposal at the 2001 Annual Meeting, the Corporation respectfully requests your advice that the Division will not recommend any enforcement action if the 2002 Proposal is omitted from the 2002 Proxy Materials and further requests your advice that the Division will not recommend any enforcement action if any proposal submitted by the Proponent is omitted from the proxy materials for any meetings of stockholders held in calendar years 2002 and 2003.

II. Other Grounds for Omission

Although the Corporation believes that it is entitled to omit the Proposal from the 2002 Proxy Materials under Rule 14a-8(h), the Corporation also believes that it may omit the Proposal from the 2002 Proxy Materials under Rule 14a-8(i)(7) because the Proposal deals with a matter relating to the Corporation's ordinary business operations.

Under Rule 14a-8(i)(7), a proposal is excludable from a company's proxy materials if it deals with a matter relating to the conduct of the ordinary business operations of the company. The Proposal relates to the determination of the date of the annual meeting of stockholders and, as such, it is a matter within the scope of the Corporation's ordinary business operations. The fixing of this date is a matter clearly within the purview of a company's board of directors and management.

In Verizon Communications, Inc. (January 30, 2001), the Division took the position that a proposal to change the date of a company's annual meeting was a matter within the scope of a company's ordinary business and was, therefore, excludable under Rule 14a-8(i)(7). Moreover, the Division has taken the position in several "no-action" letters that the determination of the location of a company's stockholder meetings is a matter relating to the conduct of the company's ordinary business operations and, thus, may be excluded from the company's proxy materials. (See, e.g., The Walt Disney Company (October 18, 1999); Lucent Technologies, Inc. (October 18, 1998); Apple Computer, Inc. (December 27, 1999) (October 29, 1993); and Northeast Utilities Service Company (December 18, 1995)).

The determination of the appropriate date for a company's annual meeting involves an assessment of, among other issues, the availability of the directors, appropriate management and staff resources to support the meeting on such date, the availability of adequate facilities on such date at the desired location and the costs associated with holding the meeting on that date at such facilities. The Corporation's Board of Directors and its management have an intimate knowledge of the Corporation's business, and, thus, can make an informed decision as to the appropriate date for the Corporation's annual meeting of stockholders. It is impractical for the Corporation's stockholders to make this decision as they do not, as a group, have the same knowledge of the Corporation and its stockholders and the availability of the directors, management and staff, and cannot as readily access and assess information regarding the feasibility of and costs associated with holding the meeting on a given date.

Moreover, to fix a specific date for all future annual meetings of the Corporation's stockholders would limit the discretion of the Board of Directors and management. Such an advance determination would eliminate the flexibility needed to fix the date of an annual meeting based upon the particular circumstances in a given year.

For these reasons, the Proposal may be omitted from the 2002 Proxy Materials under Rule 14a-8(i)(7).

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Corporation believes it is appropriate for the Division to take a no-action position if the Corporation (i) excludes the Proposal from the 2002 Proxy Materials and (ii) excludes any proposal made by the Proponent from the proxy materials for all stockholder meetings held in calendar years 2002 and 2003.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter. In the event that the Division has any questions or comments concerning the subject matter of this letter, please call the undersigned at 617-434-8630 or Anne Turley, Counsel, at 617-434-0922. If the Division disagrees with the Corporation's conclusion that the Proposal may be omitted from the 2002 Proxy Materials, I request the opportunity to confer with the Division prior to the issuance of your position.

Sincerely,

heavens and new earth'? (2 Peter 3:13; Revelation 21: 3, 4) Well, what has been the Bible's record of reliability in the past? Time and time again prophecies given even hundreds of years in advance have been fulfilled in exact detail!

For example, the Bible foretold the overthrow of mighty Babylon nearly 200 years before it happened. In fact, the Medes, who became aligned with the Persians, were named as the conquerors. And although Cyrus, the Persian king, had not even been born as yet, the Bible foretold that he would be prominent in the conquest. It said that Babylon's protecting waters, the river Euphrates, "must be dried up," and that "the gates [of Babylon] will not be shut."—Jeremiah 50:38; Isaiah 13:17-19; 44:27–45:1.

These specific details were fulfilled, as the historian Herodotus reported. Further, the Bible foretold that Babylon would eventually become uninhabited ruins. And that is just what happened. Today Babylon is a desolate heap of mounds. (Isaiah 13:20-22; Jeremiah 51:37, 41-43) And the Bible is full of other prophecies that have had dramatic fulfillment.

What then does the Bible foretell concerning the present world's system of things? It says: "The final age of this world is to be a time of troubles. Men will love nothing but money and self; they will be arrogant, boastful, and abusive; with no respect for parents, no gratitude, no piety, no natural affection . . . They will be men who put pleasure in the place of God, men who preserve the outward form of religion, but are a standing denial of its reality."—2 Timothy 3:1-5, The New English Bible.

Surely, we are seeing the fulfillment of this now!

But the Bible also foretells for "the final age of this world" these things: "Nation will rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom, and there will be food shortages." In addition, "there will be great earthquakes, and in one place after another pestilences." —Matthew 24:7; Luke 21:11.

Indeed, Bible prophecies are undergoing fulfillment today! Well, then, what about yet-to-be-fulfilled promises, such as: "The righteous themselves will possess the earth, and they will reside forever upon it," and, "They will have to beat their swords into plowshares . . . , neither will they learn war anymore"?—Psalm 37:29; Isaiah 2:4.

'That's just too good to be true,' some may say. But really, there is no reason for us to doubt anything that our Creator promises. His Word can be trusted! (Titus 1:2) By examining the evidence further, you will become ever more convinced of this.

How It Is Possible for You

Surely your heart must be moved by the promises of God regarding life in his new world of righteousness. And while some may consider the realizing of such blessings too good to be true, they are not too good to come from the hand of our loving Creator.—Psalm 145: 16; Micah 4:4.

Of course, there are requirements to be met if we are to live forever in the coming Paradise on earth. Jesus showed a principal one, saying in prayer to God: "This means everlasting life, their taking in knowledge of you, the only true God, and of the one whom you sent forth, Jesus Christ."—John 17:3.

So if we truly want to live in God's new world, we must first learn God's will and then do it. For it is a fact: This "world is passing away and so is its desire, but he that does the will of God remains forever," to enjoy eternally the blessings to be showered down by our loving Creator.—1 John 2:17.

Life in a Peaceful New World

When you look at the scene on this tract, what feelings do you have? Does not your heart yearn for the peace, happiness, and prosperity seen there? Surely it does. But is it just a dream, or fantasy, to believe these conditions will ever exist on earth?

Most people probably think so. Today's realities are war, crime, hunger, sickness, aging—to mention just a few. Yet there is reason for hope. Looking to the future, the Bible tells of a "new heavens and a new earth that we are awaiting according to [God's] promise, and in these righteousness is to dwell."—2 Peter 3:13; Isaiah 65:17.

These "new heavens" and "new earth," according to the Bible, are not a new material heavens or new literal earth. The physical earth and heavens were made perfect, and the Bible shows they will remain forever. (Psalm 89:36, 37; 104:5) The "new earth" will be a righteous society of people living on earth, and the "new heavens" will be a perfect heavenly kingdom, or government, that will rule over this earthly society of people. But is it realistic to believe that "a new earth," or glorious new world, is possible?

Well, consider the fact that such ideal conditions were part of God's original purpose for this earth. He placed the first human couple in the earthly Paradise of Eden and gave them a marvelous assignment: "Be fruitful and become many and fill the earth and subdue it." (Genesis 1:28) Yes, God's purpose was for them to have children and eventually to spread their Paradise over all the earth. Although they later chose to disobey

God, thus proving to be unfit to live forever, God's original purpose did not change. And it must be fulfilled in a new world!—Isaiah 55:11.

In fact, when you pray the Lord's Prayer, or the Our Father, asking for God's Kingdom to come, you are praying for his heavenly government to rid the earth of wickedness and to rule over this new world. (Matthew 6:9, 10) And we can be confident that God will answer that prayer, since his Word promises: "The righteous themselves will possess the earth, and they will reside forever upon it."—Psalm 37:29.

Life in God's New World

God's Kingdom will bring earthly benefits beyond compare, accomplishing everything good that God originally purposed for his people to enjoy on earth. Hatreds and prejudices will cease to exist, and eventually everyone on earth will be a true friend of everyone else. In the Bible, God promises that he will 'make wars to cease to the extremity of the earth.' "Nation will not lift up sword against nation, neither will they learn war anymore."—Psalm 46:9; Isaiah 2:4.

The whole earth will eventually be brought to a gardenlike paradise state. The Bible says: "The wilderness and the waterless region will exult, and the desert plain will be joyful and blossom as the saffron. . . . For in the wilderness waters will have burst out, and torrents in the desert plain. And the heat-parched ground will have become as a reedy pool, and the thirsty ground as springs of water."—Isaiah 35:1, 6, 7.

There will be every reason to be happy in the Paradise earth. Never again will people hunger for lack of food. "The earth itself will certainly give its produce," the Bible says. (Psalm 67:6; 72:16) All will enjoy the fruits of their own labor, as our Creator promises: "They will certainly plant vineyards and eat their fruitage. . . . they will not plant and someone else do the eating."—Isaiah 65:21, 22.

In God's new world, no longer will people be crammed into huge apartment buildings or run-down slums, for God has purposed: "They will certainly build houses and have occupancy . . . They will not build and someone else have occupancy." The Bible also promises: "They will not toil for nothing." (Isaiah 65:21-23) Thus people will have productive, satisfying work. Life will not be boring.

In time, God's Kingdom will even restore the peaceful relations that existed in the garden of Eden between animals, and between animals and humans. The Bible says: "The wolf will actually reside for a while with the male lamb, and with the kid the leopard itself will lie down, and the calf and the maned young lion and the well-fed animal all together; and a mere little boy will be leader over them."—Isaiah 11:6-9; Hosea 2:18.

Just imagine, in the Paradise earth all sicknesses and physical infirmities will also be healed! God's Word assures us: "No resident will say: 'I am sick.'" (Isaiah 33:24) "[God] will wipe out every tear from their eyes, and death will be no more, neither will mourning nor outcry nor pain be anymore. The former things have passed away."—Revelation 21:4.

When in Christ,

Writing to you this way truly gives me the opportunity to disclose some wonderful news about the kingdom of God, and how it will be established in readiness during coming tribulation. We must continue until we enter this period of time in order to see this information unfold. Let all nations gather to hear Yahweh's Witnesses declare the Kingdom message. Daniel 2:44 and Revelation 21:3,4 say to reach as many people as we can, because your invitation will be received in the right spirit. We have heard on the radio that Jack is really busy. We are glad they are, please tell him we need them, and may God bless you for doing so.

Our enclosed is an invitation to our Witness Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses if you care to make it convenient all invited are welcome all meetings to enjoy our meetings with us.

ASTONISHING NEWS ABOUT ULCERS — They're NOT caused by worry or pepperoni pizza. After decades of prescribing bland diets, relaxation, and antacids for peptic ulcers, doctors now recognize the cause as a bacterium called Helicobacter pylori. And it can be cured, not just treated, with antibiotics.

You're handed conflicting advice on TV, in the headlines, and from well-meaning but misinformed friends and relatives. Butter or margarine? Regular coffee or decaf? Walking or jogging? Do cell phones cause brain tumors? What's a safe, realistic way to lose weight?

Fortunately, now there's an easier way to get to the heart of the issue. In lively features designed to increase your comfort level with your own body, HARVARD MEN'S HEALTH WATCH tackles subjects as varied as the new targets for cholesterol. (What's "normal" and why has it changed?) Why men urinate at night. What you can do to prevent cancer. How to recognize and respond to depression. When doctors make mistakes. New thinking about the "anxiety gene." How marital status may affect your prostate cancer survival odds.

When you understand the issues and what's at stake, you have the power to make informed decisions. HARVARD MEN'S HEALTH WATCH sheds light on the health factors that affect how long, and how well, you live...

ARE CIGARS OKAY, SINCE YOU DON'T INHALE? — Sigmund Freud, who died of cigar-related jaw cancer, once noted that "sometimes a cigar is just a cigar." All too often, it's also a killer. Although you don't inhale, cigars are as potent as cigarettes in causing cancers of the mouth, throat and esophagus, as well as lung cancer, emphysema and heart disease. The only safe cigar is the one that's not smoked.

IS THERE "SAFE SEX" AFTER A HEART ATTACK? — Absolutely. In terms of physical exertion, sex ranks about the same as playing Ping-Pong or doing the foxtrot. The odds of having a heart attack during sex are just 20 in a million. And if low-dose aspirin protects men against anger-induced heart attacks, might aspirin make sex safer, too? We answer the questions on men's minds that are rarely discussed in the doctor's office.

SHOULD YOU SHOVEL SNOW? — It's the one form of exercise that can be hazardous to any man over 50. It's much riskier than other physical exercise because of the cold weather (an added stress on your heart), the isometric exertion (blood pressure soars), the episodic nature of the movement (seasonal, and occasional) and machismo (we don't always know when to stop). Get a plow or hire a teenager.

IS RED WINE THE HEALTHIEST CHOICE? — Red wine has gotten the good press because it contains phenols and flavonoids, which can function as antioxidants. But a recent study compared the effects of wine (red and white), beer and spirits and found that the heart-protective ingredient is the alcohol itself. Drink what you like, in moderation of course.

Under the skilled editorship of Harvey B. Simon, M.D., HARVARD MEN'S HEALTH WATCH is fast becoming one of the most fascinating ways to stay on top of your health. Dr. Simon, a founding member of the Harvard Cardiovascular Health Center and specialist in internal medicine and preventive cardiology, has that rare ability to translate the latest medical breakthroughs into practical advice.

HARVARD MEN'S HEALTH WATCH keeps you posted on everything from the best way to get rid of ugly nail fungus to the discovery that New York men, on average, have a sperm count that's twice that of their Los Angeles counterparts. Do you know, for instance...

CAN YOU TELL AT A GLANCE IF A MAN IS AT RISK FOR HEART DISEASE? From that beer belly to a crease in the ear lobe to the pattern of baldness, scientists are pinpointing physical factors that may raise a man's risk of heart disease. While some are beyond our control, recognizing them may provide the motivation we need to minimize controllable risk factors like smoking, cholesterol, hypertension, stress and obesity.

Men who subscribe to HARVARD MEN'S HEALTH WATCH already know about homocysteine, and why it's being called the "new cholesterol."

Although few people have heard of it, elevated levels of this amino acid appear to triple the risk of heart attack. The good news is that diet and the right vitamin supplements can dramatically reduce homocysteine levels — although scientists still don't know if this will reduce the risk. But getting enough folic acid, B6 and B12 every day makes good sense while research continues.

As men our age too often learn the hard way, ignorance can be hazardous to our health. Yet guys who are used to making important decisions every day in business too often bury their heads in the sand when it comes to their own bodies.

The SSQ Harvard Conference will feature fifteen scientists discussing their views on a variety of critical questions including:

Are there connections between the theories and disciplines of modern science and the teachings and practices of the world's religions?

Can science inform the human spiritual quest and can the religious traditions inform scientific questions?

As we look to science and technology for solutions to pressing problems, can we expect any guidance or resources from the world's spiritual traditions?

SATELLITE DOWNLINK AND WEBCAST: Integrating Science and Religion

On Monday, October 22nd from 3:00 pm–9:00 pm EDT, a six-hour session of the SSQ Harvard Conference will be telecast to colleges, universities, and seminaries nationwide and offered on the Internet by the Episcopal Cathedral Telecasting Network (ECTN), a television and Internet initiative of Trinity Church Wall Street.

Contemporary science is rewriting the book on human nature. Recent inquiries in neuroscience, cognitive psychology, artificial intelligence, evolutionary biology, and the social sciences reveal a human creature whose defining characteristics are profoundly relational and embodied. How does this emerging view of the human being fit with traditional religious views? The telecast speakers will include: naturalist and ethologist Jane Goodall, physicist and Nobel Laureate William Phillips, Hindu astronomer Ramanath Cowsik, Muslim astrophysicist Bruno Guiderdoni, robotics expert Manuela Veloso, and Templeton Prize winners Paul Davies and Arthur Peacocke. These scientists, drawn from across scientific disciplines, bring to the table the most recent insights on "what it means to be human." At the same time, each is working to integrate scientific results with the wisdom of the world's religious and spiritual traditions. The tensions they discuss, and the syntheses that they propose, will offer viewers a state-of-the-art picture of what it means to be human today.

The telecast portion of the Conference is co-sponsored by Trinity Institute, a continuing education program dedicated to theological renewal within the Episcopal Church and an outreach ministry of Trinity Church Wall Street in New York City. This broadcast is part of a series of six conferences during the 2001–2002 academic year that will look at how contemporary science is changing our understanding of "What It Means To Be Human." You can learn more about the conference series by visiting www.trininst.org.

CONFERENCE OVERVIEW.....The growth of knowledge in the natural sciences is revolutionizing our understanding of the universe, our planet, and ourselves. At the same time the world's spiritual traditions remain powerful forces that shape and influence billions of people around the world. Indeed, these traditions will have a major role to play as humanity faces the staggering challenges of the 21st century.

Within and across the world's cultures, humanity faces an array of complex questions—about our human identity, our destiny, and the destiny of the world we share. Even as science and technology transform societies, the world's religious and spiritual traditions remain crucial resources for addressing the questions of who we are and where we are going. Science and the Spiritual Quest has gathered leading scientists who have reflected and conversed together on the profound spiritual implications of their work. Science offers them a common language to bridge their religious differences, while spirituality offers a shared context of values and meaning within which to address the challenges of science. Now, we believe, it is time to broaden the circle of discourse, sharing the mutual illumination of science and spirit with a wider public audience. We cordially invite you to join us in exploring the possibilities and challenges posed at the interface of science and the human spiritual quest.

CONFERENCE OVERVIEW.....The growth of knowledge in the natural sciences is revolutionizing our understanding of the universe, our planet, and ourselves. At the same time the world's spiritual traditions remain powerful forces that shape and influence billions of people around the world. Indeed, these traditions will have a major role to play as humanity faces the staggering challenges of the 21st century.

Within and across the world's cultures, humanity faces an array of complex questions—about our human identity, our destiny, and the destiny of the world we share. Even as science and technology transform societies, the world's religious and spiritual traditions remain crucial resources for addressing the questions of who we are and where we are going. Science and the Spiritual Quest has gathered leading scientists who have reflected and conversed together on the profound spiritual implications of their work. Science offers them a common language to bridge their religious differences, while spirituality offers a shared context of values and meaning within which to address the challenges of science. Now, we believe, it is time to broaden the circle of discourse, sharing the mutual illumination of science and spirit with a wider public audience. We cordially invite you to join us in exploring the possibilities and challenges posed at the interface of science and the human spiritual quest.

SATELLITE DOWNLINK AND WEBCAST: Integration: Science and Religion

On Monday, October 22nd, from 1:00 pm - 3:00 pm EDT, a live downlink of the Science and Religion Conference will be telecast to colleges, universities, seminaries, and other educational institutions by the Episcopal Church Telecasting Network (ECTN). The downlink and internet broadcast will originate at Trinity Church Wall Street.

Contemporary science is reviewing the book on human nature. Research in neuroscience, cognitive psychology, artificial intelligence, evolutionary biology, and the genetic sciences is revealing human creature whose defining characteristics are profoundly relational and embodied. How do these emerging views of the human being fit with traditional religious views? The elite panel of speakers will include naturalist and ethologist Jane Goodall, physicist and Nobel laureate William Phillips, Hindu astronomer Ramanach Nowsik, Muslim astrophysicist Bruno Guiderdoni, robotics expert Manuela Veloso, and Templeton Prize winners Paul Davies and Arthur Peacocke. These scientists, drawn from across scientific disciplines, bring to the table the most recent insights on "what it means to be human." At the same time, each is working to integrate scientific results with the wisdom of the world's religious and spiritual traditions. The tensions they discuss, and the syntheses that they propose, will offer viewers a state-of-the-art picture of what it means to be human today.

The telecast portion of the Conference is co-sponsored by Trinity Institute, a continuing education program dedicated to theological renewal within the Episcopal Church, and an outreach ministry of Trinity Church Wall Street in New York City. This broadcast is part of a series for the conference during the 2001-2002 academic year that will look at how contemporary science is changing our understanding of "What It Means To Be Human." You can learn more about the conference series by visiting www.trinins.org.

When FedEx delivers a package, normally someone must sign for it. The signature provides proof that the package has been delivered. By signing this Authorization and Agreement, however, you allow FedEx to change its usual policy and deliver your packages according to these instructions.* When both you and a FedEx representative have completed and signed this form, this release is your authorization to have your packages delivered without FedEx obtaining your signature. (This agreement is effective 3 months from the date it is received by FedEx.) You agree that:

If you request a P.O.D. (proof-of-delivery), you will receive a receipt listing the designated place of delivery and the release number of the signature as shown on the notice.

You acknowledge that when FedEx has delivered the package according to the terms of this Agreement, you agree to indemnify FedEx and hold FedEx harmless from all liability claims, including any expenses, attorney's fees or other litigation costs due to any loss and/or damage to shipments delivered by FedEx under this Agreement.

If you want to cancel this Agreement, or if your business closes or relocates, you must give FedEx prior notice of at least 7 calendar days. Otherwise, this Agreement becomes immediately null and void.

You will not hold FedEx liable for failure to comply with these instructions.

Ex-producer says George Harrison is ready to die

By FRANCI RICHARDSON

Two weeks after ex-Beatle George Harrison assured fans he was feeling fine after undergoing cancer treatment in Switzerland, his former producer announced the ex-Beatle is at peace and hoping that he thing will go away.

"He has an indomitable spirit but he knows that he is going to die soon and he is accepting that," George Martin, during the revolutionary group's heyday known as the quiet one of the "Fab Four," told The Sun of London yesterday. He is taking brain tumor at a Swiss clinic.

The 58-year-old singer and guitarist emerged from radiotherapy say

"I am feeling fine and I am really sorry for the unnecessary worry which has been caused by the reports appearing in today's press. Please do not worry," Harrison in a statement issued July 10.

Ex-producer says George Harrison is ready

By FRANCI RICHARDSON

Two weeks after ex-Beatle George Harrison assured fans he was feeling fine after undergoing cancer treatment in Switzerland, his former producer announced the musician doesn't have long to live.

"He has an indomitable spirit but he knows that he is going to die soon and he is accepting that," George Martin, the so-called "Fifth Beatle," told The Mail of London yesterday. He is taking it easy and hoping that the thing will go away.

The 58-year-old singer and guitarist — known as the quiet one of the Fab Four in the 1960s — was recently treated for a tumor at a Swiss clinic. He emerged from radiotherapy saying he felt well.

Boy seat spares kids from having to testify

PARALYZED PARISH Christopher Reardon allegedly molested young boys when he was a youth counselor at St. Agnes [illegible] in Middleton.

[illegible] through a jury trial on appeal, the [illegible] is spared a jury re- [illegible] jury selection for Reardon's trial.

[illegible] the case to Hampden County because he decided Reardon could not receive a fair trial in Essex County due to intense publicity. Sources said some of the youths who were being counseled on recently recently informed prosecutors they would not take the stand.

Reardon's decision to change his pleas came Saturday during a meeting at the Essex County jail in Middleton attended by Borenstein, one of Reardon's attorneys, and a prosecutor, sources said.

"It's good for the kids," said [illegible] source. "They're happy they are not going to have to go through a trial. They were going to be traumatized all over again."

Last night, WBZ-TV (Ch. 4) reported that the Reardon would plead guilty to seven of 10 [illegible] the remaining 100 while WHZ-TV (Ch. 4) reported he would plead guilty to all the rape charges and some of the remaining charges.

"I wish he didn't a long time ago. So does everybody else," an unidentified father told Channel 7. "The emotional stress has been tough. I'm relieved, really relieved."

At St. Agnes Church yesterday, where Reardon was the youth leader before his June 2000 arrest, the Rev. Richard Driscoll called the Reardon case "a terrible ordeal."

The priest stated the shocking revelations of Reardon's alleged crimes tested the bounds of parishioners' faith, "especially those of you in this parish whose peace has been disrupted by this scandal."

Prosecutor Mary Reardon, who youngsters affectionately called "Ducky," [illegible] and molested 29 boys, aged 10 to 14, over a five-year period at the church, a basement room at the Danvers YMCA, and at his Middleton home.

He kept [illegible] written and computer-generated lists detailing his abuse and where the acts were committed, authorities said. He also allegedly chronicled the physical characteristics of hundreds of other boys he observed.

The scope of the charges has jarred so many lives in the normally tranquil towns of Middleton and Danvers that many residents simply shake their heads and back away when asked about the case.

"My kids will say, 'When is Ducky going on trial?' They knew him for years," said Barbara Cloutman, a Danvers mother of three.

Middleton, a much smaller community, with just 7,000 residents, the case has affected just about everyone.

"I've been here a long time," said Ira Singer, the town administrator for the last 19 years. "And I honestly feel that this is the worst thing that the community has ever had."

Singer said one measure of just how many townsfolk have been molested children is that everyone else he has talked to, usually, do not know anyone.

"I'm pleased not to hear any of those names mentioned in any of the circles I travel," he said.

Kay Lazar, Richard J. Sweet, and Jessica Heslam contributed to this report.

SECTION 89.

REVELATION given through Joseph Smith the Prophet, at Kirtland, Ohio, February 27, 1833, known as the Word of Wisdom. —— Abstinence from wine, strong drink, tobacco and hot drinks enjoined—Moderation in the eating of meat—Wholesome foods—Promises to those who live according to these precepts.

1. A Word of Wisdom, for the benefit of the council of high priests, assembled in Kirtland, and the church, and also the saints in Zion—

2. To be sent greeting; not by commandment or constraint, but by revelation and the word of wisdom, showing forth the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days—

3. Given for a principle with [a]promise, adapted to the capacity of the weak and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints.

4. Behold, verily, thus saith the Lord unto you: In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation—

5. That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together to offer up your sacraments before him.

6. And, behold, this should be wine, yea, [a]pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make.

7. And, again, [a]strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies.

8. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill.

9. And again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly.

10. And again, verily I say unto you, [a]all wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man—a, see 2a. SEC. 89: a, vers. 18—21. b, 27:1—14. c, 27:3, 4. d, 59:17—20. Gen. 1:29. Al. 46:40.

11. Every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof; all these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving.

12. Yea, flesh also of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, have ordained for the use of man with thanksgiving; nevertheless they are to be used sparingly;

13. And it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used, [a]only in times of winter, or of cold, or famine.

14. All grain is ordained for the use of man and of beasts, to be the staff of life, not only for man but for the beasts of the field, and the fowls of heaven, and all wild animals that run or creep on the earth;

15. And these hath God made for the use of man only in [a]times of famine and excess of hunger.

16. All grain is good for the food of man; as also the fruit of the vine; that which yieldeth fruit, whether in the ground or above the ground—

17. Nevertheless, wheat for man, and corn for the ox, and oats for the horse, and rye for the fowls and for swine, and for all beasts of the field, and barley for all useful animals, and for mild drinks, as also other grain.

18. And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall [a]receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones;

19. And shall [a]find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures;

20. And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

21. And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel [a]shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen.

1. A Word of Wisdom, for the benefit of the council of high priests, assembled in Kirtland, and the church, and also the saints in Zion—

2. To be sent greeting; not by commandment or constraint, but by revelation and the word of wisdom, showing forth the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days—

3. Given for a principle with [a]promise, adapted to the capacity of the weak and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints.

4. Behold, verily, thus saith the Lord unto you: In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation—

5. That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together to offer up your sacraments before him.

6. And, behold, this should be wine, yea, [b]pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make.

7. And, again, [c]strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies.

8. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill.

9. And again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly.

10. And again, verily I say unto you, [d]all wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man—

11. Every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof; all these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving.

13. And it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used, [e]only in times of winter, or of cold, or famine.

14. All grain is ordained for the use of man and of beasts, to be the staff of life, not only for man but for the beasts of the field, and the fowls of heaven, and all wild animals that run or creep on the earth;

15. And these hath God made for the use of man only in [f]times of famine and excess of hunger.

16. All grain is good for the food of man; as also the fruit of the vine; that which yieldeth fruit, whether in the ground or above the ground—for mild drinks, as also other grain.

18. And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall [g]receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones;

19. And shall [h]find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures;

20. And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

21. And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel [i]shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen.

after treatment, 80% of patients were free of panic attacks; 18%–64% no longer suffered from agoraphobia, and 33%–60% were no longer seriously impaired. In a 1996 study, one in three were found to have recovered and about half were somewhat improved six years after a course of antidepressant treatment and cognitive behavioral therapy. In still another study, 50% were free of panic after two years, but only 20% were "high-functioning." More long-term studies will tell how long drugs should be continued, which treatments work best for which patients, and which parts of cognitive behavioral therapy are most important.

Stalking

Stalking is obsessional pursuit, harassment, and intimidation by a person who has or believes he has a significant personal relationship with the object of his unwanted attention. Stalkers may send letters, packages, or e-mails, make harassing phone calls, or appear repeatedly at the victim's home or workplace. Sometimes they destroy property and assault or even murder their victims. In the spectrum of actions that lie between surveillance and physical harm, it is probably repeated harassment that defines the difference between stalking and unwanted courtship by a stranger, rejected suitor, or former lover.

Broadly defined, stalking is surprisingly common. In one survey, 12% of women and 4% of men said they had been stalked at some time. That's more than 12 million women and nearly 4 million men — even if in many of these cases the victims were only moderately concerned for their safety. The annual rate may be as high as 6% for women and 1.5% for men; these numbers seem high because stalking often persists for several years. In one large survey of victims, about three-quarters had been spied on, almost half had been overtly threatened, almost a third had had property destroyed, and 10% had had a pet killed or threatened. Victims often have to be treated for anxiety, depression, and post-traumatic stress. Their lives may be seriously disrupted; many have to change their jobs or move.

Although rare, false claims of stalking are also possible. Whenever a great deal of attention is given to a social problem, a few people will take advantage of the public's interest for their own purposes. False claims themselves can become a form of harassment; for example, there are a few cases in which innocent people have been jailed.

Some 80%–90% of stalkers are men and 80%–90% of their victims are women, but all other combinations may occur, including same-sex combinations. Stalking is a symptom, and the underlying motives and psychiatric diagnoses vary from person to person. The most highly publicized stalkers are those who have delusions about their relationship with the victim. Mental health professionals may be stalked by a psychotic patient, and anyone may be pursued by a delusional acquaintance or stranger. Celebrity stalking and other cases reported in the press often fall into this class; a well-known example is the woman who believed she was the wife of the talk show host David Letterman and was once arrested while driving his car.

This kind of delusion is sometimes called erotomania, a term that suggests obsessive love or a belief on the part of the stalker that the victim is in love with him. The stalker may also suffer from another kind of delusional disorder or from schizophrenia or bipolar disorder. Unable to sustain normal personal relationships, he conceives an imaginary relationship with someone he knows slightly or has never met. The fantasy becomes quite detailed, and he feels compelled to take some action to prove its reality. When the victim does not respond as expected, threats and even violence may ensue.

Parent-Child Correlations

The Relationship between Parental Quantity Measures and Child Measures

There were no significant findings in this area when mothers' and fathers' scores were examined together. A potentially interesting trend, however, will be mentioned later on. Total number of words or utterances spoken by mother and father combined were completely unrelated to any of the child's measures, including the child's age. It thus was not the case that the older or the more verbal children got more speech from parents.

Mother-Father comparisons. As can be seen from Table 15, in almost every case the amount of speech by father was more strongly associated with child measures than the amount of speech by mother although they did not reach statistical significance. The correlation between father's amount of speech (total number of words) and amount of interaction (total number of turns) and child's age is very similar to that of mother and child. I.e. Parents are similarly tuned to the child's age: neither appears to adjust the amount of talking they do in accordance with the child's age. However, when measures of the child's verbalness are examined - his MLU, his syntactic score (DSS) and the total amount of speech by the child - fathers' correlations are higher than mothers'. In most cases they fall short of statistical significance, but in some instances they approach it. Thus for example, the correlation between total number of father's turns to child and the child's DSS score is .45 ($P<.08$) while mothers' is -.10(NS). Father's total number of turns and child's total number of words is .46 ($P<.07$) while mother's is .12 (NS).

PSYCHOPHARMACOLOGY IN THE ELDERLY: RISKS, BENEFITS, AND SIDE EFFECTS

Stephen L. Pinals, M.D.

Older adults are among the greatest consumers of medications and the number of prescribed drugs increases directly with age. The use of psychotropic drugs is disproportionately higher in the elderly as compared to younger adults, and particularly so with medically ill and nursing home patients. As a result, older adults are more likely to suffer from the effects of polypharmacy, drug interactions, and adverse reactions. Poor rates of medication compliance add yet another layer of complexity to the task of prescribing for the elderly.

Age-related changes in biologic and cognitive functioning have significant impact upon standard pharmacologic practice. For instance, hepatic and renal drug clearance diminish with age, leading to increased drug accumulation and side effects. Normal aging also leads to reduced concentrations of neurotransmitters and potentially enhanced sensitivity to the cognitive effects of psychotropic drugs. For these reasons and many others, geriatric patients are more likely to experience common side effects of psychotropic drugs: sedation, confusion, hypotension, cardiac side effects, and anticholinergic reactions. The challenge for physicians and nurse practitioners is to prescribe lower starting doses of appropriate medications, and to monitor response, reactions, and side effects closely.

In the last decade, numerous medications have become available with improved safety profiles and lower risks for dangerous side effects. As a result, there have been dramatic increases in the number of new prescriptions from general practitioners for their elderly patients. Naturally, these medications are not without risk, and poorly informed consumers (and clinicians) are often subject to untold reactions and negative outcomes. In this review, we will discuss some of the potential risks, benefits, and side effects of the more recently available antidepressant, antipsychotic, and cognitive enhancing medications commonly used in the elderly.

REARDON

Reardon plea means children won't have to testify

By TOM FARMER

While accused serial pedophile Christopher J. Reardon's expected guilty plea today will spare 29 young boys the agony of testifying against him, the victims and their families will have to wait "a couple of weeks" to find out how long Reardon will spend behind bars, sources said.

Reardon, 29, is scheduled to plead guilty in Salem Superior Court to a massive 130-count indictment charging him with systematically targeting and molesting young boys while working in trusted youth positions at St. Agnes Church in Middleton and the Danvers YMCA. After accepting the plea, Judge Isaac Borenstein will set a date for sentencing, sources said.

"It will be a couple of weeks," said one source. "The judge is going to listen to recommendations from both sides and then impose his sentence."

Borenstein could sentence Reardon to life in prison, but sources said that is unlikely with a guilty plea.

"He's not going to get life, but we're looking for some nasty jail time," said one source.

And even if Reardon escapes a life sentence, the state's civil commitment law could keep him locked up until he dies. The 1999 law allows sexual predators to be committed to a state treatment center after the expiration of their prison term if a judge or jury deems them too dangerous to be released.

Once committed by a judge, or through a jury trial on appeal, the offender is enlisted to a yearly review.

Jury selection for Reardon's trial was scheduled to begin today in Northampton and testimony could have lasted two months. His alleged victims, all pre-pubescent boys, would have had to travel 2½ hours from their North Shore homes and stay in motels.

Borenstein moved the case to Hampden County because he decided Reardon could not receive a fair trial in Essex County due to intense publicity. Sources said some of the youths who were being counsel on to testify recently informed prosecutors they would not take the stand.

Reardon's decision to change his plea came Saturday during a meeting at the Essex County Jail in Middleton attended by Borenstein, one of Reardon's attorneys, and a prosecutor, sources said.

"It's good for the kids," said another source. "We're happy they are not going to have to go through a trial. They were going to be traumatized all over again."

PARALYZED PARISH: Christopher Reardon allegedly molested young boys when he was a youth counselor at St. Agnes Parish in Middleton.

Last night, WHDH-TV (Ch. 7) reported that that Reardon would plead guilty to seven of 10 rape charges and 80 of the remaining 100 indictments, while WBZ-TV (Ch. 4) reported he would plead guilty to all the rape charges and some of the remaining charges.

"I wish he did it a long time ago. So does everybody else," an unidentified father told Channel 7. "The emotional stress has been tough. I'm relieved, really relieved."

At St. Agnes Church yesterday, where Reardon was the youth leader before his June 2000 arrest, the Rev. Richard Driscoll called the Reardon case a "terrible ordeal."

The priest noted the shocking revelations of Reardon's alleged crimes tested the bounds of parishioners' faith, "especially those of you in this parish whose peace has been disturbed by this scandal."

Prosecutors say Reardon, who youngsters affectionately called "Ducky," targeted and molested 29 boys, aged 7 to 14, over a five-year period at the church, a basement room at the Danvers YMCA, and his Middleton home.

He kept handwritten and computer-generated lists detailing his abuse and where the acts were committed, authorities said. He also allegedly chronicled the physical characteristics of hundreds of other boys he observed.

The scope of the charges has jarred so many lives in the normally tranquil towns of Middleton and Danvers that many residents simply shake their heads and back away when asked about the case.

"My kids still say, 'When is Ducky going on trial?' They knew him for years," said Barbara Clouatman, a Danvers mother of three.

In Middleton, a much smaller community with just 7,000 residents, the case has affected just about everyone.

"I've been here a long time," said Ira Singer, the town administrator for the past 19 years. "And I can easily say that this is the toughest time the community has gone through."

Singer said one measure of just how fiercely townsfolk have shielded the molested children is that he, and everyone else he has talked to locally, do not know their names.

"I'm pleased not to hear any of those names mentioned in any of the circles I travel," he said.

Kay Lazar, Laurel J. Sweet, and Jessica Heslam contributed to this report.

Thief takes OxyContin in Randolph

Boston HERALD

The trend to rob Bay State pharmacies of OxyContin, a potent painkiller for cancer patients, continued yesterday when a man made off with more than 1,000 pills from Osco Drug in Randolph, police said.

Police have interviewed four or five witnesses and are reviewing a videotape to identify the man.

George Dawson, at 103, learned to read at 98

Boston Herald

DALLAS — George Dawson, the grandson of slaves who learned to read at age 98 and published his memoirs with the help of a Port Townsend, Wash., teacher last year, died Thursday. He was 103.

Mr. Dawson's memoir, "Life is So Good," was reissued in paperback last month by Random House. Dawson wrote that one of his earliest memories was watching a black man get lynched in the town square of Marshall, Texas, his birthplace.

As the oldest of five children, Mr. Dawson went to work instead of school. He built levees on the Mississippi, drove spikes for the railroads, broke horses, and worked in a sawmill.

But Mr. Dawson said the turning point of his life came the day a literacy volunteer knocked on his door and asked if he'd like to learn to read. Dawson attended classes and also spoke regularly to groups of school children. — ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duluth faces up to ugly chapter

Group brings lynchings of 3 men in 1920 to fore

By Craig Gustafson
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DULUTH, Minn. — For decades, this city tried to bury the memories of June 15, 1920, the night a mob of thousands of whites dragged three black men from a jail and hanged them from a light post.

High school history courses didn't mention the lynchings, spurred by a false accusation that the men had raped a white woman.

Residents didn't talk about what had happened. Nobody acknowledged an infamous photograph, one that local residents made into a postcard, that showed a crowd gathered around the hanging bodies. Nobody wanted to admit that his grandfather might have been in the crowd, smiling.

Eight decades later, Duluth is holding its first week of remembrance to remind the community what happened that night.

"When they first came to me, I thought, 'Why would I want to tell the world that something so horrible happened in my city?' " Mayor Gary Doty said.

It took some persuasion from the organizers to win his approval.

This week, the committee has held poetry readings, a concert, a fund-raiser to create a memorial sculpture, and readings from the book "The Lynchings in Duluth," by Michael Fedo.

Doty said community leaders persuaded him to look at the memorial as a "stepping-off" point for race discussions.

"Race relations in this community are good," Doty said. "But then you're talking to a white, middle-aged guy, so there must be some things we need to work on."

The victims — Elias Clayton, Elmer Jackson, and Isaac McGhie — had been traveling with the John Robinson Show Circus, in town for celebrations of Duluth's 50th anniversary.

On June 14, 1920, a teenager — a year or two younger than the three circus workers — told police the men had raped his female companion and forced him to watch, according to the Duluth Police Department's records.

The story was a lie, but the men were arrested and jailed.

Outside, an angry buzz began, and the following evening, a mob broke into the jail, dragged the men to the intersection of First Street and Second Avenue East, and hoisted them by their necks from a light post.

Yesterday, more than 100 people followed the same path of the slaughter, pausing for three minutes of silence in front of the old police station.

For many, the weeklong remembrance is their first exposure to that chapter of the city's history.

The lynchings have always divided the community, said Portia Johnson of the organizing committee.

"There's other ways of lynching folks," she said. "Like no jobs, like you have a number of blacks in jail disproportionate to the number in society. That's a lynching."

Many of Duluth's residents decline to talk about the lynchings because, "in this part of the country they never thought this could happen," she said.

While many wanted to forget, Johnson said the black community could not.

An unwritten rule is to use Crawford Funeral Service whenever a loved one dies.

James Crawford was the only person who would take in the bodies of the slain men and give them a proper burial.

His great-granddaughter, Joan Crawford, still runs the business, and from her office, she can see the street corner where the mob hanged the men.

"It makes you embarrassed to be a white person," she said.

Times have changed, but ignorance and a lack of understanding still persist, said Howard Taylor, who moved to Duluth in 1960 to escape racial tension in the South.

He did not know of the lynching that had taken place in the very town he had chosen.

Even then, there were areas of town where a black man knew not to go, he said. While race relations still aren't perfect, he says he has seen vast improvement and has nothing bad to say about the community.

The latest census figures show that fewer than 4 percent of Duluth's 85,000 residents are black; 92 percent are white.

Of the future memorial, Taylor said, "I hope this opens the eyes of some people."

Jeffrey T. Graham, at 53; led BankBoston programs

By Chris Tangney
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Jeffrey Turner Graham, former director of government affairs and community investment for BankBoston, died yesterday in his home in Jamaica Plain after a yearlong battle with pancreatic cancer. He was 53.

Born in Battle Creek, Mich., he graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and attended the American School in Switzerland before graduating magna cum laude from Yale College in 1969. He received a bachelor of arts degree with exceptional distinction in history and the arts and letters.

After graduating from Yale, Mr. Graham enlisted in the Army, where he served for two years, graduating from the Defense Information School.

He received a juris doctor degree from Harvard Law School in 1974.

Mr. Graham began his professional career in the mid 1970s at the Michigan Department of Commerce and as an executive assistant to Governor William G. Milliken.

He moved to Jamaica Plain in the early 1980s and took a position at Bank of Boston in 1983 as senior public affairs counsel. During his 17-year career at the bank, which became BankBoston, Mr. Graham was responsible for the institution's community investment portfolio throughout New England.

He was recognized as a leader in the banking community's efforts to revitalize communities throughout New England, and he developed equal-access-to-lending programs in Boston, Providence, and New Haven.

"Jeff was one of those special individuals you saw out in the neighborhoods battling for Boston," Mayor Thomas Menino said yesterday. "He was one of the bright lights of our community. We will miss him as a friend."

Mr. Graham was a member of several community organizations and acted as BankBoston's liaison between local and national government officials, voicing community concerns and helping to develop programs designed to provide equal opportunity to low-income people and struggling small businesses.

He was cochairman of the Community Investment and Consumer Bankers Association, and a member of the Massachusetts Association of Community Development Corporations, the Massachusetts Bankers Association, and the Massachusetts Community and Banking Council.

Chad Gifford, who headed BankBoston before it merged with Fleet Bank and is now president of

JEFFREY TURNER GRAHAM

FleetBoston Financial Corp., said: "We were privileged to work with Jeff for many years and to benefit from his wisdom, thoughtfulness, and passion to our company, his colleagues, and the community. Our thoughts are with his family and their loss of this very special man."

Mr. Graham was an avid golfer and an accomplished cook who enjoyed entertaining friends.

"People who knew Jeff socially knew his talents in the kitchen, but those who worked with him knew he had a great recipe for the city's neighborhoods," said Karen Schwartzman, a former co-worker at BankBoston and longtime colleague. "Jeff combined his sense of fairness with intellect, diplomacy, and persuasion to direct BankBoston's resources in a way that would make a real difference in the lives of people with less."

Mr. Graham leaves his wife, Mary (Long); two sons, Andrew L. and Ian T. of Jamaica Plain; and a sister, Julia G. Howell of Fort Myers, Fla.

A memorial service will be held April 28 at 11 a.m. in the Unitarian Church, Jamaica Plain.

Catholic colleges face doctrine requirement

June 16 2001

ATLANTA — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops, completing a decades-long process, yesterday voted unanimously to require theologians at Catholic colleges to get approval of their teachings from a local bishop.

►More news on the bishops' conference, A10 and B2.

Even before the vote was final, several Catholic theologians at Boston College and elsewhere around the country publicly declared that they will refuse to seek such a seal of approval, saying that to do so would threaten their academic freedom. But others have said that they will eagerly apply in an effort to demonstrate to teachers and students that lessons billed as Catholic are true to church teachings.

FORT DRUM, N.Y., June 25 — Under endless skies on the rolling hills of upstate New York, Boston's Roman Catholic Archbishop, Humberto Cardinal Medeiros, celebrated Holy Communion Sunday for members of the 26th YANKEE Infantry Division who are performing annual training here.

In a stirring address to the troops assembled on the sunny west side of Division Hill, Cardinal Medeiros said ever since the National Guard's founding by our forebears, it has rendered fine service to our nation in time of need. He singled out the men and women of the YANKEE Division for their aid to Boston Archdiocesan residents ravaged by February's snow storm. Cardinal Medeiros credited the Guard with saving many lives and alleviating suffering during the blizzard.

Concelebrants at the Mass were Chaplains (Lieutenant Colonel) Thomas Berberich of the 43d Brigade, (Major) Daniel M. O'Hour, of the 1st Brigade, Major Harold E. Leblanc, of YANKEE Division Headquarters, Captain Edward J. McCabe, of the 1101st Engineers, Captain Daniel Sullivan, of the 43d Brigade, and (First Lieutenant) Edward Richmond, of the 26th Division Support Command. Also concelebrating Mass was the Reverend James McCune, the Cardinal's secretary.

After the Mass, YANKEE Division Commander, Major General Nicholas J. Del Torto hosted a luncheon for the Cardinal. There the prelate was made an honorary member of the YANKEE Division and was presented with a miniature statue and a $1000 from the Division Chaplains' fund.

After visiting with members of Boston's 26th Adjutant General Company, 26th Military Police Company and Headquarters Company, 26th YANKEE Infantry Division, Cardinal Medeiros returned to Boston, calling the citizen soldiers of the Backbone of the Commonwealth.

Reflections.....

THE STEWARDSHIP OF SPEECH

Edwin Newman's best-sellers, A CIVIL TONGUE and STRICTLY SPEAKING are humorous gibes at those who clutter language with cliches and bombast. Perhaps he should prod us sometime about irresponsible speech. This precious gift of God is a sacred trust. Do I honor that trust or excuse blindly my abuse of it? Sometimes diplomacy cloaks hypocrisy or we call harshness honesty. Crudeness is being natural, ridicule is humor. Stubbornness is called strength of character. Anger is only righteous indignation. Blasphemy is a sign of manliness. Is that me or do others know me for my kind, encouraging and thankful words? Self-control means controlling the tongue. "A good man thinks before he speaks." PROVERBS 10:31, 14:23

Happy Birthday, America

The 26th Inf. Div. and Ft. Drum will host a 50 gun salute for civilian and military members at 12 noon on the 4th of July in front of post headquarters (T-3), to commemorate the 202d Anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

New England arrives

By Spc Thomas J. Spisak
26th Infantry Division, PAO

Fort Drum regulars may have noticed the sweet tones of New England accents floating through the post this week.

The YANKEE Division has arrived.

Led by Major General Nicholas J. Del Torto of Medford, Mass., the 26th (YANKEE) Infantry Division is made up of citizen soldiers from three New England states, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island.

Major General Del Torto pointed out that annual training is the time his troops hone the lessons and show the spirit of esprit acquired during the year's weekend drills that enable them to respond quickly and effectively to any emergency.

"Last year, the YANKEE Division performed well in Army readiness evaluations during annual training," General Del Torto said. "Our high evaluations were exemplified by the Division's response to the February snow emergency.

"Last winter, YANKEE Division Guardsmen were called out to fight the worst blizzard to hit the Massachusetts coast in this century. State officials called the Division's response 'magnificent.'"

The YANKEE Division began their two week training by taking to the field for a week of bivouac.

FACULTY DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Harvard Medical School has long held the standard that its continuing medical education programs be free of commercial bias.

Now, in accord with the disclosure policy of the Medical School as well as standards set forth by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education, speakers have been asked to disclose any relationships they have with companies producing pharmaceuticals, medical equipment, prostheses, etc. that might be germane to the content of their lectures. Such disclosure is not intended to suggest or condone bias in any presentation, but is elicited to provide registrants with information that might be of potential importance to their evaluation of a given talk. In addition, faculty have been asked to describe any "off label" uses of pharmaceutical products and devices.

1. The following speakers have reported no significant relationships with industry:

Norman B. Anderson, PhD
Margaret A. Baim, MS, RN, CS
Natalia Vonnegut Beck, BA, MA

1. Introduction

Despite the undeniably important role that religion has played in the history of the world, controversy persists concerning its definition. English and English (1958) proposed the following:

"Religion is a system of attitudes, practices, rites, ceremonies and beliefs that individuals adopt in order to put themselves in relationship to God or to a supernatural world.

Lowenthal (1995) suggested that major religious traditions share a number of beliefs including:

1. the existence of a non-material (spiritual) reality
2. the idea that the purpose of life is to increase harmony
3. an understanding that God as the source of moral directives
4. participation in social organizations that promote these beliefs

The role of religion in the West has undergone substantial transformation since the Age of Enlightenment. The power of the scientific method that divests itself of subjectivity, in order to examine the object world rationally has at times proved a powerful foe of traditional religions. The scientific attitude, which dominates public displays in non-theocratic societies often, belies the private beliefs of individuals. Surveys in the U.S. and Great Britain indicate that the vast majority of individuals profess religious beliefs. However, they also indicate widespread dissatisfaction with traditional religious systems.

The conflict between religions and science generally reflects a literal rather than a metaphoric reading of religious scripture. When religion and science disagree, e.g. concerning the date of creation or evolution, science has virtually always prevailed, in its ability to explicate and predict the behavior of the material world.

JOHN CRAPO TO FLEET JUNE 16 2001

This has lead some prominent individuals, e.g. Freud, Marx and Russell, to declare that religion is essentially an illusion, that man must divest himself of, in order to face squarely the "reality" around him. However, most individuals who aggressively argue the relative merits of science or religion ignore the fact that these two systems are designed to address different categories of knowledge. For this reason, their contributions are incomparable.

Accurate explanations of measurable phenomena are the domain of science. When science and religion are at odds concerning such phenomena, invariably religion must yield. However, the attribution of subjective meaning is the legitimate province of religion. As Einstein said "Religion without science is blind. Science without religion is lame".

2. The Origins of Religion

The history of religion begins with the earliest evidence of human activity. Prehistoric burials carbon-dated at ~300,000 B.C., have found what appears to have been ritual activities consistent with religious practice. The fossil record suggests that man worshipped totem animals in Western Europe as early as 50,000 years ago.

The great cave paintings of France and Spain indicate an advanced culture capable of artistic representation and shamanistic practices of initiation. The widespread appearance of artifacts of bountiful women at this time suggests that a system of religious practice with emphasis on fertility. This has been interpreted by Gimbutas as a cult of the Goddess; however, substantial controversy exists concerning this matter.

A series of great Aryan migrations, originating in the region of Scythia and fanning out in all directions spread an advanced civilization that exhibited the capacity to domesticate horses and adopt them for the purpose of drawing chariots. Aryan influence extended as far we it as Ireland, east to India, south to Greece and Canaan and north to Scandinavia. The diffusion of this culture has been conserved in the Indo-European dialects that are prevalent in the Western world and India. This great migration also coincided with a diminished role for nature religions and the appearance of an iconography depicting sky gods, e.g. Zeuss, India, Yahweh.

The present Judeo-Christian traditions of the West are syncretic religions that combine aspects of polytheism with an advanced monotheistic belief. The latter appears to have first developed in ancient Egypt during the reign of Akhenaton and was subsequently consolidated in Israel during the 1st millennium BCE.

In contrast, the major early religious traditions of the East, Hinduism and Taoism, developed largely independent of events in the West, most likely because of the physical isolation of the Orient. However, discourse along the Great Silk Trade Routes may have allowed a substantial degree of philosophical exchange between East and West.

In the East, the God-image is best described as an "energy" that inhabits all aspects of the universe. Creation is an organic and repeating event that alternates with cosmic destruction. There is no definite beginning or end; re-incarnation is a prevalent belief. The god within is generally "experienced" by a system of ritual yogic practices that direct (yoke) the attention of the individual inward in an effort to realize altered states of mind. In some traditions, e.g. Hinayana Buddhism, it is uncertain whether the term religion as English and English defined it applies, as there is no formal belief in a divine being. However, the etymology of the term religion (re-ligio to re-connect) suggests that the meditative traditions are indeed religious systems.

In the West, God is viewed as creator that is outside and greater than his creation. Creation is viewed as a one-time or limited event, so that religion is historical. These beliefs often lead to reverence and worship of the god without, rather than a direct search for the god-image within.

3. The Mystical Experience

It is generally believed that religion reflects the consolidation and dissemination of the mystical experiences of its founders. From Abraham to Buddha to Jesus, the mythology of religion reflects the systematic organization of the mystical experience and teachings of a small number of individuals by their followers. Observance based on an interpretation of the mystical experience in time becomes orthodox tradition. Subsequent "heterodox" mystical experiences by devotees are actively discouraged and punishable by excommunication and even death.

The term "mysticism" derives from the mystery cults of ancient Greece and the orient which were widespread in their popularity even after the advent of Christianity in the Holy Roman Empire. "Mystai" referred to the initiates of these cults.

The mystery religions cultivated an experience that encouraged altered mental states, which left the initiate both transformed and enlightened. The mystery rituals at Eleusis have been depicted on extant amphora vases and appear to suggest that initiates were exposed to an experience of death and rebirth. Secrecy concerning what had been experienced was the rule, and unlike most religious systems there was apparently little emphasis on formal ritual observances. The myth of Demeter and Persephone, a metaphor for the agricultural cycle, was used to illustrate the mystery of death and incarnation. Grain contaminated with ergot alkaloids may have played a critical role in the ceremony and probably lead to visual hallucinations that reinforced the supernatural message of the mysteries. Other mystery cults claimed participants in the ancient world. The cult of Dionysos, celebrated as the Bacchanalia, was outlawed by the citizens of Athens in 167 B.C.E. because of its excessive orgiastic passions; it appears to have addressed the mysterious re-incarnation of the dismembered god, and likely contributed to the Christian myth.

In his text, The Varieties of Religious Experience, William James explored the mystical experience. This topic was further explored by Rudolph Otto in The Idea of the Holy. Religious experience according to these authors shares the following features.

1. an experience often termed "ineffable"
2. a unique form of affect that Otto referred to as numinous which was both mysterious and fascinating (mysterium tremendum et fascinans)
3. an immediacy of the experience
4. a sense of being affected by something outside and greater than one's own self

Evidence suggests that this experience is archetypal, i.e. all human beings have the capacity to undergo these experiences; however, they may differ substantially in intensity, frequency and their subsequent interpretation.

4. The Science of the Religious Experience

Few studies have captured individuals in the midst of a spontaneous numinous experience. However, there is good reason to believe that it is similar if not identical to certain states reported during intense absorptive meditation, some of which have been objectively investigated.

In Zen and the Brain, Austin skillfully weaves aspect of observation, neuroscience, western and Buddhist psychology, into a description of the mystical state. The findings are complex but support the observations made by Benson and co-workers on the relaxation response.

The mystical experience is reported as a subjectively altered mental state accompanied by stereotypic physiologic findings. Features of the altered subjective state include:

1. absorption in the moment (immanence)
2. a sense of time dilation (e-terran)
3. a sense of awe, fear, and smallness in the presence of a perceived "other"
4. these subjective states may be accompanied by auditory, or visual hallucinations that are generally informed by the orthodox beliefs of the individual

Physiological changes that precede or accompany these experiences include:

a) activation of specific cortical, limbic and brainstem nuclei
b) synchronization and slowing of electrical activity within the CNS
c) decreased respiratory rate
d) diminished oxygen consumption
e) diminished autonomic tone

1. Summary

The religious or mystical experience is the cornerstone of all great religions. This experience may be hard to capture; however, it is certainly within the realm of scientific observation. As medical scientist, we are not publicly in business of theology, so that we must remain publicly neutral with respect to the transpersonal meaning of such phenomena. However, there is a science of religious experience that may supercede specific theological beliefs. The traditional links between religious belief and healing physiological mechanisms that can lead to the eradication of certain pathophysiologic conditions. The religious experience should not be eschewed by medical science, as it is a legitimate object for study and could yield important information concerning health and disease.

Employers challenged by Guard, Reserve absences

By Karen Jowers
Times staff writer

Companies that employ members of the Guard and Reserve generally are coping with the rising number of absences due to deployments, but as these deployments increase, so do the problems the companies encounter, according to a survey of employers.

Nearly one-fourth of the companies whose reservist employees were called away for military-related duties more than 10 working days annually reported having problems. Overall, 18 percent of companies that employ reservists reported they had problems in the last three years.

The increased reliance on National Guard and Reserve units to support the active components means more time away from work, placing more stress on the reservists, the companies that employ them and co-workers who must fulfill their duties while they are gone.

Reservists now contribute more than 13 million duty days each year to defense missions and operations — a 13-fold increase over the 1980s.

In an effort to gauge the level of support for the reserve mission, researchers for the Defense Department interviewed 2,037 employers from October 1999 to January 2000, including 920 companies that do not now employ reservists, Reserve Affairs officials released the results of the 1999 Reserve Employer Survey just before Labor Day.

About 90 percent of the nation's 883,000 drilling reservists are employed by a small number of companies — an estimated 8.4 percent of the nation's businesses, said Army National Guard Lt. Col. Terry Jones, a spokesman for the Office of Reserve Affairs.

The other 10 percent of reservists work for the federal government as civilians.

About 20 percent of the nation's large businesses — those with more than 50 employees — employ reservists, compared with just 4.5 percent of small businesses, he said.

Reservists have been largely uninformed about the actual impact of increased deployments on employers and their businesses, said Charles Cragin, principal deputy assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs, in a statement accompanying the report.

Gone too long

While Cragin said he was pleased with the overall findings of the survey — that employers generally have positive views about service in the Guard and Reserve — it did reveal some problems, he said.

The companies' top concern involved the length and frequency of military-related absences. Most complained that reservists were gone too long and that call-ups came at inconvenient times.

Employers said reservists' military duties often resulted in an increased workload for other employees. Of the companies that employ reservists, 28 percent said their absences resulted in a heavier workload for others.

Not unexpectedly, the problem gets worse the longer the reservist is gone.

At companies where reservists deployed for more than 10 days a year, 33 percent of the employers said it resulted in a much heavier workload for other employees. But only 20 percent said a heavier workload was a significant problem, which reservists missed 10 days or less.

Twelve percent of employers said their reservist employees miss more than 30 work days per year, on average, because of military duties. About one-fourth said they replace reservist employees if they will be gone more than a month, but most companies assign the reservist's duties to other employees.

A need to educate employers

The survey revealed a general lack of knowledge (among employers nationally) about the Guard and Reserve, said Cragin. "More work will be needed to increase awareness and knowledge."

When asked whether they thought the duties and responsibilities of the National Guard and Reserve were expanding or shrinking, 81 percent of employers who don't employ reservists said yes, compared with 47 percent of employers who do employ reservists.

"Our ultimate goal is to help the department build better relationships between employers and their reservist employees and gain a better understanding of the impact of military service on civilian employers," Cragin said.

He urged military leaders not to read too much into the results of the survey, however. "The survey was conducted as a pilot project," he said. "It was designed as a starting point to develop annual surveys in the future. He plans to refine it, establish a database and track changes in employers' views toward the Guard and Reserve.

Other findings of the survey:

■ 96 percent of employers said they were satisfied with the overall performance of reservist employees in their organizations.

■ About 6 percent of companies that did not have a reservist on the payroll said they preferred hiring reservists, compared with 18 percent of companies that did employ at least one reservist. Surprisingly, the number of companies with a hiring preference for reservists was even greater — 20 percent — if they employed reservists who were away from work more than 10 days in the preceding year due to their military duties. The companies were not asked whether they have a bias against hiring reservists.

■ Those who employ reservists are more likely to provide health benefits to their employees. About 95 percent of companies that employ reservists also provide health benefits — and about three-fourths of the companies also provide health benefits if reservists are absent for more than 30 days at a time. Of the companies that did not employ reservists, 77 percent provided health benefits. □

Recluse accused of abusing family

His six children unknown to town

SALISBURY — Locked away from the world in a converted nightclub, the six brothers and sisters had never gone to a movie, never attended school, hadn't even seen a doctor. And according to police, they had never told a soul about what their domineering father, Patrick McMullen, had been doing to them.

On Wednesday, McMullen, 37, was arraigned and accused of crimes that shocked this tiny coastal town: raping two of his daughters and beating his sons.

The accusations resulted when his 36-year-old wife, who police say had been totally controlled by him, filed a restraining order against McMullen on May 8, opening the door to an investigation.

Police say they were disturbed when they discovered that few townspeople even knew that the family existed.

"They were totally isolated," said one investigator, Ann Champagne. "They knew no other playmates other than their siblings."

McMullen has pleaded not guilty to charges including rape, indecent assault and battery, disseminating pornography to a minor, and possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

"I have been doing this thing for 25 years, and in 25 years you see a lot of isolation and victimization," said Champagne. "This is by far the worst case I have ever seen."

SALISBURY — Locked away from the world in a converted chicken coop, the six brothers and sisters had never gone to a movie, never attended school, hadn't even seen a doctor. And, according to police, they had never told a soul about what their domineering father, Patrick McMullen, had been doing to them.

On Wednesday, McMullen, 56, was arraigned and accused of crimes that shocked this tiny coastal town, raping two of his daughters and beating his sons. "I didn't even know that house existed," said a worker in the town clerk's office, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "In the census books, I have nobody living there."

Police said McMullen's daughters, ages 17, 13, and 8, and his sons, ages 15, 12, and 10, were rarely allowed to venture beyond the 8-foot, brown wooden fence that surrounds the family's wooded lot. The children — who apparently have no birth certificates, medical records, or school records — often spent months at a time indoors, police said.

Most townspeople remember the building where the family lived as an old nightclub called "Finnegan's Wake," which sported a gag coffin in the front yard. The building was later an antique shop and then a bar again.

Six years ago, McMullen rented the lot, which is zoned as commercial property, and turned it into a yard for renovating then selling abandoned furniture and junked cars.

The first thing he did, neighbors recall, was build an 8-foot fence and fasten several "No Trespassing" signs across it. Then he moved in a fork lift, parts of old trucks, and a blue bus.

"Once in a while, you'd see the kids peeking through the fence at us or [urinating] in a corner," said a man who owns a business nearby.

But some neighbors said the children were so quiet that the only hints of their existence were a tire swing dangling from a tree and the trampoline that once stood in the yard.

McMullen's landlords — Harold and Violet Nabha, who own several other properties in the area — could not be reached for comment yesterday. A friend who asked not to be identified said the Nabhas were not aware that McMullen and his family were living on the lot.

"I can tell you for sure there is no way — and I'm positive about that — that they would have ever rented that place as a house," the friend said.

But others recall hints that something was wrong and said the town's live-and-let-live attitude kept people from asking too many questions.

"He never let the kids out of the house," said Rich Murphy, a 17-year-old who worked at a fence manufacturing company next door. "Nobody called anybody. Everybody just blew it off, thinking he was weird."

Murphy, who lives at a nearby trailer park, said McMullen would often come there to visit a friend.

"I never saw him hurt anybody, but he had a bad temper," Murphy said. "He wouldn't let anybody know his family."

Police said the house had several large rooms — two with bunk beds where the girls and boys each slept — and a television that stayed unplugged until McMullen allowed the children to watch it. The children spent much of their time moving junk around the back yard, Champagne said.

McMullen's wife, police said, had married around the age of 18 and never was employed outside the home. Police withheld her name and she could not be identified by a records check.

"She was very bright and totally devoted to her husband and her children," Champagne said. "This was a woman who was totally controlled. It was difficult for her to make any decision."

Police said McMullen has a criminal record that includes driving violations and an arrest for disorderly conduct.

According to Champagne, McMullen's wife was only allowed to leave the property to go to a church she attended in Exeter, part of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, whose members are known as Mormons. The investigator said members of the church suspected that McMullen was abusive to his family and they encouraged her to go to police.

McMullen's neighbor, Beverly Stanwood, recalled the McMullen children as polite, with a "gentle, sweet" mother.

Her husband, Keith Stanwood, a former police officer, said of McMullen that "there was nothing that I ever saw him do to abuse the children."

"It comes to a point where you just let people live their own lives, but obviously this was life beyond [normal]," he said.

When asked whether she should have called the police, Keith Stanwood said he had "no idea" of the abuse going on inside the house. "If the people aren't ready to help themselves, you open up a Pandora's box," he said.

Edward R. Kondayan, 91; Sox batboy, vet, 'Mr. Eddie'

By Tom Long
Globe Staff

Mister Eddie never held high office, never wrote the Great American Novel or made a rocket ship to the moon, but, according to the Rev. Thomas B. Kennedy, former associate rector of Trinity Church in Boston, he was a part of the wonderful fabric of the life of this town.

Edward R. Kondayan, a retired draftsman known respectfully as Mister Eddie, died of congestive heart failure June 5 in Hale House in Boston. He was 91.

Mr. Kondayan was born in London to Armenian parents who had emigrated from Turkey. He came to the United States with his family as a young boy.

After studying drafting at Boston Architectural Center, he was employed by the firm of Whitman and Howard for many years.

During the Depression, he was a batboy for the visiting teams at Fenway Park. That was when the batboys had to really hustle because they worked for tips, Rev. Kennedy said yesterday. "He got to know Babe Ruth, Jimmy Foxx, Lou Gehrig, and other greats and would regale us with stories of their exploits."

A veteran of the Navy during World War II, Mr. Kondayan was a member of Trinity Church for about 80 years. He was a choirboy and played on the church's athletic teams in his youth, and was an usher for many years.

One of his duties at the church was to man the microphone switches. "You know, who wields the real power in this church?" he once asked Rev. Kennedy, his finger hovering over the power switches.

He was a small man, only about 5 feet tall, Rev. Kennedy described him as an impeccable dresser and consummate gentleman who enjoyed dining at the Ritz hotel and made many friends there.

A few years ago, when Mr. Kondayan was being treated at Youville Hospital in Cambridge, the staff at the Ritz prepared dinner for him and had it delivered to the hospital.

He leaves no immediate survivors.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. June 22 in Trinity Church in Boston.

Edward R. Kondayan, 91; Sox batboy, vet, Mr. Eddie

By Tom Long

Mister Eddie never fielded a ground ball, never stroked a double. Ah, but he could play baseball on the church lawn. And he was an usher for many years.

One of his duties at the church was to man the microphone when Red Sox broadcaster Jon Miller, a fellow parishioner, was asked to say a few words about a departed friend. Edward R. Kondayan, who died Monday at the age of 91, was known to many friends and neighbors as Mr. Eddie.

A few years ago, when Mr. Kondayan was being treated at Youville Hospital in Cambridge, he had his hair prepared, dinner ordered, and a bottle of champagne chilled for him and had it delivered to the hospital.

He leaves no immediate survivors.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. June 22 in Trinity Church in Boston.

PASTA NIGHT
Sunday, June 24, immediately after the 5:00 PM Mass, there will be a pasta dinner in the parish hall, featuring four different types of pasta from Italy and Peru. It should be an enjoyable evening and a good way to meet and socialize with other parishioners. Tickets are $5 at the door, and the funds will help toward the upkeep of the memorial garden.

BAPTISM

Isabel Hess will be baptized and become a member of our Christian Community at the 10:00 AM Mass on Sunday. Welcome, Isabel, and congratulations to your parents and sponsors.

Friday, June 22, is the Feast of the Sacred Heart. We celebrate the love God has for us in the person of Jesus Christ. Devotion to the Sacred Heart became popular in the 17th Century through Margaret Mary Alacoque, a cloistered nun burdened with intense physical and emotional suffering. She had visions of Christ, whose love burned unceasingly:

"Behold the heart that has loved people so, yet is loved so little in return."

We will have exposition of the Blessed Sacrament here after the 8:00 AM Mass for as long as there are people present and in the afternoon from 4 to 8. Evening Prayer and Benediction will be at 7:45.

NEW CHARLES RIVER RUN

The Franciscan Children's Hospital & Rehab. Center is looking for volunteers and runners for the "New Charles River Run" of 7 miles or 5K, beginning at 10:00 AM on Sunday, June 24, at Daley Field, Brighton. Registration will be 7:00 to 9:00, and the fee of $20 will benefit the Center. Contact Cariann G. Harsh, Special Events Mgr., Franciscan Children's Hospital, 30 Warren St., Boston 02135.

The sign of peace has become a routine part of the celebration of Mass. How it is carried out varies, and there can be distortions. The "General Instructions of the Roman Missal" say "it is suitable that each person offer the sign of peace only to those nearby and in a dignified manner." It is a sign before we receive Holy Communion that we are united by mutual love in the body of Christ

DSS says Salisbury abuse was preventable

June 16 2001

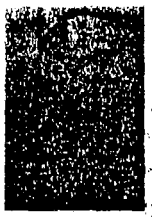
As the wife and six children of Patrick S. McMullen of Salisbury — who has been accused of raping two of his daughters and beating his sons — took refuge in a safe house yesterday, state social workers lamented that years of sexual and physical abuse in that household might have been prevented.

State officials said the McMullen family was visited several times in 1995 by workers from the Department of Social Services, who reported no evidence of the domestic violence or sexual assault that Christine McMullen recently told authorities had been a tragic part of family life since 1984.

"This really exemplifies the wall of silence around some domestic violence," DSS spokeswoman Carol Yelverton said.

"Unfortunately, this mother had ample and safe opportunities to seek help. Neither the mother, nor the children, nor any extended-family member expressed any concerns to us in 1995, when we were called in because of a home-schooling situation."



McMULLEN

DSS staff and the Merrimac police chief visited the McMullens after school officials said the family had failed to file a home-schooling plan. The family was interviewed at the Merrimac home of Christine McMullen's mother, a Merrimac school teacher with whom they said they lived.

"We had concerns that the family had been living in a store, but they insisted they were living with the maternal grandmother," Yelverton said. "We were assured they were ... sleeping there, bathing, getting their meals, that it was a real home environment and that we weren't going to encounter any problems with an educational plan being submitted to the schools."

But in her request for a restraining order filed May 7 at Newburyport District Court, Christine McMullen described 17 years of beatings and sexual abuse that began shortly after their marriage and the birth of their children.

The alleged sexual abuse of their daughters — now 17, 13, and 8 — "consisted of fondling, oral sex both received and given, and attempts at penetration," according to the request, which was approved.

Patrick McMullen, 37, was arraigned Wednesday on charges that he raped two of his daughters and beat his sons. He is being held in the Middleton House of Correction in lieu of $105,000 bail.

Before the arrest, the McMullens had lived as virtual recluses in Salisbury, in a rundown former bar separated from Route 1 by an 8-foot fence. The children, ranging in age from 6 to 17, had never been to school or to a doctor, police said.

But in 1995, the family was "connected with a church and extended family" and was not isolated from the outside world, Yelverton said. Christine McMullen and the children were interviewed several times outside the presence of her husband, Yelverton added.

"The children were clean. They were playing. There was no indication that the children were highly stressed," Yelverton said. "We only wish somebody had come forward with a concern. If somebody had just said, 'I'm not feeling right about something in there.'

"It's a terrible tragedy that victims of domestic violence are so intimidated and fearful."

After 1984, the abuse increased "with each passing year," Christine McMullen wrote in court documents. She married when she was 18 and traveled with Patrick McMullen to a home in Maine and then back to Massachusetts.

"He has physically hurt us repeatedly with painful blows to the head, abdomen, chest, etc., causing bruising, abrasions, and headaches," Christine McMullen said in court documents. "He has kicked the children, spanked them with a belt causing severe bruising, and issued tight squeezes with one hand upon the neck."

Authorities said Christine McMullen approached police with her allegations of abuse at the urging of fellow members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Exeter, N.H. A couple at the home where Christine McMullen and her children are staying declined to be interviewed yesterday.

In her restraining order request, Christine McMullen also detailed the abuse that she allegedly received.

"I have suffered numerous black eyes and fat split lips, as well as having objects such as having a 2-by-4, rock, and large flashlight thrown at me," she said. "He, intending to play, has bit us, leaving bruises, redness, and occasionally breaking skin."

Neighbors said they rarely saw the family, with the exception of a small flea market that McMullen occasionally operated from his yard on weekends.

In another report, filed May 5 with Salisbury police, Christine McMullen hinted at her daily struggle to make the best of the relationship.

"He is of a domineering and controlling nature of which I have been blind, due to my desire to have a happy relationship," McMullen said.

Yelverton said DSS is now addressing the emotional and physical needs of the children.

"As awful a hell as that place was, it is what they knew, and it is gone," Yelverton said. "There is a terrific need at this point . . . [for] counseling and support and a sense that you're safe."

After 1984, the abuse increased "with each passing year," Christine McMullen wrote in court documents. She married when she was 18 and traveled with Patrick McMullen to a home in Maine and then back to Massachusetts.

"He has physically hurt us repeatedly with painful blows to the head, abdomen, chest, etc., causing bruising, abrasions, and headaches," Christine McMullen said in court documents. "He has kicked the children, spanked them with a belt causing severe bruising, and issued tight squeezes with one hand upon the neck."

Authorities said Christine McMullen approached police with her allegations of abuse at the urging of fellow members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Exeter, N.H. A couple at the home where Christine McMullen and her children are staying declined to be interviewed yesterday.

In her restraining order request, Christine McMullen also detailed the abuse that she allegedly received.

"I have suffered numerous black eyes and fat split lips, as well as having objects such as having a 2-by-4, rock, and large flashlight thrown at me," she said. "He, intending to play, has bit us, leaving bruises, redness, and occasionally breaking skin."

Neighbors said they rarely saw the family, with the exception of a small flea market that McMullen occasionally operated from his yard on weekends.

In another report, filed May 5 with Salisbury police, Christine McMullen hinted at her daily struggle to make the best of the relationship.

"He is of a domineering and controlling nature of which I have been blind, due to my desire to have a happy relationship," McMullen said.

Yelverton said DSS is now addressing the emotional and physical needs of the children.

"As awful a hell as that place was, it is what they knew, and it is gone," Yelverton said. "There is a terrific need at this point ... [for] counseling and support and a sense that you're safe."

DSS says Salisbury family abuse was preventable

Patrick McMullen, 37, was arraigned Wednesday on charges that he raped two of his daughters and beat his sons. He is being held in the Middleton House of Correction in lieu of $105,000 bail.

Before the arrest, the McMullens had lived as virtual recluses in Salisbury, in a rundown former bar separated from Route 1 by an 8-foot fence. The children, ranging in age from 8 to 17, had never been to school or to a doctor, police said.

But in 1995, the family was "connected with a church and extended family" and was not isolated from the outside world, Yelverton said. Christine McMullen and the children were interviewed several times outside the presence of her husband, Yelverton added.

"The children were clean. They were playing. There was no indication that the children were highly stressed," Yelverton said. "We only wish somebody had come forward with a concern. If somebody had just said, 'I'm not feeling right about something in there.'

"It's a terrible tragedy that victims of domestic violence are so intimidated and fearful."

DSS says Salisbury abuse was preventable

As the wife and six children of Patrick S. McMullen of Salisbury — who has been accused of raping two of his daughters and beating his sons — took refuge in a safe house yesterday, state social workers lamented that years of sexual and physical abuse in that household might have been prevented.

State officials said the McMullen family was visited several times in 1995 by workers from the Department of Social Services, who reported no evidence of the domestic violence or sexual assault that Christine McMullen recently told authorities had been a tragic part of family life since 1984.

"This really exemplifies the wall of silence around some domestic violence," DSS spokeswoman Carol Yelverton said.

"Unfortunately, this mother had ample and safe opportunities to seek help. Neither the mother, nor the children, nor any extended-family member expressed any concerns to us in 1995, when we were called in because of a home-schooling situation."

McMULLEN

DSS staff and the Merrimac police chief visited the McMullens after school officials said the family had failed to file a home-schooling plan. The family was interviewed at the Merrimac home of Christine McMullen's mother, a Merrimac school teacher with whom they said they lived.

"We had concerns that the family had been living in a store, but they insisted they were living with the maternal grandmother," Yelverton said. "We were assured they were . . . sleeping there, bathing, getting their meals, that it was a real home environment and that we weren't going to encounter any problems with an educational plan being submitted to the schools."

But in her request for a restraining order filed May 7 at Newburyport District Court, Christine McMullen described 17 years of beatings and sexual abuse that began shortly after their marriage and the birth of their children.

The alleged sexual abuse of their daughters — now 17, 13, and 8 — "consisted of fondling, oral sex both received and given, and attempts at penetration," according to the request, which was approved.

Employers o
Guard, Rese

By Karen Jowers

Companies that employ members of the Guard and Reserve generally are coping with their rising number of absences due to deployments, but as these deployments increase, so do the problems the companies encounter, according to a survey of employers.

Nearly one-fourth of the companies whose reservist employees were called away for military related duties more than 10 working days annually reported having problems. Overall, 16 percent of companies that employ reservists reported they had problems in the last three years.

The increased reliance on National Guard and Reserve units to support the active components means more time away from work, placing more stress on the reservists, the companies that employ them and coworkers who must fulfill their duties while they are gone.

Reservists now contribute more than 13 million duty days each year to defense missions and operations — a 13-fold increase over the 1980s.

In an effort to gauge the level of support for the reserve mission, researchers for the Defense Department interviewed 2,037 employers from October 1999 to January 2000, including 920 companies that do not now employ reservists. Reserve Affairs officials released the results of the 1999 Reserve Employer Survey last week, before Labor Day.

About 90 percent of the nation's 863,000 drilling reservists are employed by a small number of companies — an estimated 6 percent of the nation's businesses, said Army National Guard Lt. Col. Larry Jones, a spokesman for the Office of Reserve Affairs.

The other 10 percent of reservists work for the federal government as civilians.

About 20 percent of the nation's large businesses — those with more than 50 employees — employ reservists, compared with just 4.6 percent of small businesses, according to the survey.

"We have been largely uninformed about the actual impact of increased deployments on employers and their businesses," said Charles Cragin, principal deputy assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs, in a statement accompanying the report.

DIVISION OF CORPORATION FINANCE
INFORMAL PROCEDURES REGARDING SHAREHOLDER PROPOSALS

The Division of Corporation Finance believes that its responsibility with respect to matters arising under Rule 14a-8 [17 CFR 240.14a-8], as with other matters under the proxy rules, is to aid those who must comply with the rule by offering informal advice and suggestions and to determine, initially, whether or not it may be appropriate in a particular matter to recommend enforcement action to the Commission. In connection with a shareholder proposal under Rule 14a-8, the Division's staff considers the information furnished to it by the Company in support of its intention to exclude the proposals from the Company's proxy materials, as well as any information furnished by the proponent or the proponent's representative.

Although Rule 14a-8(k) does not require any communications from shareholders to the Commission's staff, the staff will always consider information concerning alleged violations of the statutes administered by the Commission, including argument as to whether or not activities proposed to be taken would be violative of the statute or rule involved. The receipt by the staff of such information, however, should not be construed as changing the staff's informal procedures and proxy review into a formal or adversary procedure.

It is important to note that the staff's and Commission's no-action responses to Rule 14a-8(j) submissions reflect only informal views. The determinations reached in these no-action letters do not and cannot adjudicate the merits of a company's position with respect to the proposal. Only a court such as a U.S. District Court can decide whether a company is obligated to include shareholder proposals in its proxy materials. Accordingly a discretionary determination not to recommend or take Commission enforcement action, does not preclude a proponent, or any shareholder of a company, from pursuing any rights he or she may have against the company in court, should the management omit the proposal from the company's proxy material.

Response of the Office of Chief Counsel
Division of Corporation Finance

Re: FleetBoston Financial Corporation
Incoming letter dated November 30, 2001

The proposal relates to changing the annual meeting date.

There appears to be some basis for your view that FleetBoston may exclude the proposal under rule 14a-8(h)(3). We note your representation that a similar proposal from this proponent was included in FleetBoston's proxy statement for its 2001 annual meeting, but that neither the proponent nor his representative appeared to present the proposal at that meeting. Moreover, the proponent does not appear to have stated a "good Cause" for the failure to appear. Accordingly, we will not recommend enforcement action to the Commission if FleetBoston omits the proposal from its proxy materials in reliance on rule 14a-8(h)(3). In reaching this position, we have not found it necessary to address the alternative bases for omission upon which FleetBoston relies.

This response will also apply to any future submissions to FleetBoston by the same proponent with respect to any shareholder meetings held by FleetBoston during calendar year 2002 and calendar year 2003. Accordingly, we will deem FleetBoston's statement under rule 14a-8(j) to satisfy FleetBoston's future obligations under rule 14a-8(j) with respect to proposals submitted to FleetBoston by the same proponent during calendar year 2002 and calendar year 2003.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Gurzenski
