Letter to Shareholders

Dear Shareholders:

The best way to describe the year 2002 is to say that it was a time when we embraced opportunities and met the challenges of a unique year. It was a year in which interest rates were at 40-year lows, the unstable geopolitical environment depressed both the economy and the financial markets, and the corporate world was often in turmoil. Yet, powered by the elements that comprise our community banking strategy – strong management, growth, market leadership, and a balanced earnings stream – we achieved record earnings.

In April, we completed a significant strategic acquisition expanding our Rhode Island market area. We acquired First Financial Corp. (First Bank and Trust), with branches in key market locations, including Cranston and Providence, Rhode Island. That addition has already been a success.

In late 2002, we broke ground for our sixteenth branch office located in Warwick, a major city in central Rhode Island. Scheduled to open in the spring of 2003, the 7,300+ square foot branch will house commercial lending, asset management, trust services, and mortgage banking specialists, as well as offering full-service retail banking services.

The growth potential for us is important when you consider that the Providence and Kent County markets, where our new branches are located, have more than six times the number of households and businesses as the Washington County market. While we face a greater number of competitors in these areas, we enter them equipped with an excellent reputation for both service quality and banking expertise.

Challenged by a difficult economy, all areas of the Bank worked to contribute to the bottom line in 2002. Our commercial lending area – already established as one of the top commercial lenders in Washington County – benefited from our First Bank and Trust acquisition by adding new clients and establishing a presence as a statewide lender. As a result, commercial loans now comprise almost fifty percent of our total loan portfolio.

Phoenix Investment Management and our Trust and Investment Services area expanded their client bases and worked hard to preserve their clients' wealth in the turbulent 2002 market. Both areas continue to serve as key contributors to noninterest income.

Faced with a low interest rate environment, we aggressively pursued refinancing opportunities, the resale market and construction financing, booking a record number of mortgage loans in 2002. We also offered a competitive home equity line rate and saw exceptional growth in that line of business. As a result of the First Bank acquisition and strong advertising, we experienced terrific core deposit growth and exceeded $1 billion in deposits for the first time in the Corporation's history.

At our Annual Meeting on April 23, 2002, we bid a fond farewell to former Washington Trust Bancorp, Inc. Chairman and CEO Joseph J. Kirby, as he retired from the Board of Directors. Joe has spent 39 years with Washington Trust and will continue with us as a member of the Directors' Advisory Council. At the Meeting last April, we also welcomed Patrick J. Shanahan, Jr., retired Chairman, President and CEO of the former First Financial Corp., as a new member of our Board of Directors. Pat has extensive experience in the banking industry and public company ownership and is a great addition to our board.

For more than 200 years, Washington Trust has been guided by boards of directors and management teams who have served as leaders in their respective fields and in the local communities we serve. Our current Board is no different. In addition to Jack Treanor and myself, it includes 14 non-employee directors, each of whom brings a wealth of talent and diversity to our Corporation. We have always taken corporate governance seriously. Each of our major board committees is chaired by independent board members, including our Audit Committee which is composed solely of outside directors. In addition, for many years, the independent directors have chosen a Lead Director to chair the Board on any issues appropriately handled only by the independent directors. Your Corporation matters to us.

The financial results posted on these pages reflect our commitment to the vision to be the Best Community Bank and Trust Company in New England. We continue our progress toward fulfillment of that vision and accomplishment of our mission, which is to provide our shareholders with the highest possible value. We thank you for your ongoing support and look forward to continuing our relationship with you in the years to come.

Sincerely,

John C. Warren
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

a full range of new products and services at their disposal, including mortgages and home equity loans, trust and investment services, and merchant services. In addition, they appreciated the conveniences of an expanded ATM network and online banking services for personal and business accounts.

Our new First Bank customers enjoyed a seamless transition to Washington Trust, and as a result, we retained virtually every customer. We accomplished this by

The year 2002 was full of opportunities – opportunities to grow our market area, to meet and exceed our customers' expectations, and to deepen our roots in the communities we serve. For 202 years, Washington Trust's primary market area has been Washington County and southeastern Connecticut. Our expansion into Providence and Kent Counties significantly increases our market area.

The "Welcome to Washington Trust" brochure for former First Bank customers included 25 pages of comprehensive information on all Washington Trust products, easy-to-read grids for account comparison, and coupons for discounts on banking services.

The spring 2002 addition of the First Bank branches in Cranston and Providence and the consolidation of the First Bank branches in North Kingstown and Richmond, Rhode Island, generated some 5,000 new Washington Trust's new location at the corner of Park and Reservoir Avenues in Cranston, Rhode Island benefits from being at the crossroads of one of the state's busiest traffic intersections.

In the fall of 2002, Washington Trust Chairman and CEO John C. Warren was joined by some two dozen dignitaries for a "vault signing" ceremony at the new branch. In his remarks, Mr. Warren encouraged everyone present to write something that might inspire the Bank's future leaders, should the vault be uncovered and the signatures exposed when Washington Trust turns 300 years old in the year 2100.

To celebrate our expansion into Providence County, we embarked on a bank-wide promotion of our relationship accounts. The program helped to generate some $75 million in deposits, of which approximately 80% were new to Washington Trust.

Commonly known as the "Crossroads of Rhode Island," Kent County – and specifically the City of Warwick – is the dynamic, burgeoning economic region that links Washington County in the south to Providence County and other points north. It is precisely for these reasons that Washington Trust selected this spot in central Rhode Island as the home for its 16th branch location, to open in the spring of 2003.

With construction of the new branch well underway, Washington Trust has begun serving this new community. Members of the Bank's commercial lending, retail banking, and trust and investment management division have been proactively reaching out to new prospects, in anticipation of the branch's opening. We have extended our community outreach to the Warwick area by providing financial support for nonprofit institutions and organizations such as Kent County Hospital, the Boys & Girls Clubs of Warwick and the Sargent Rehabilitation Center, as well as building relationships with groups such as the Central Rhode Island Chamber of Commerce.

The addition of retail branches in Cranston, Providence and Warwick provides Washington Trust with locations within densely populated neighborhoods and thriving business districts that are key to our future growth.

Business Banking

Already one of the leading commercial lenders in Washington County, Rhode Island and southeastern Connecticut, our expansion into central Rhode Island helped establish us as a statewide business bank.

Key to unlocking growth opportunities in all aspects of business banking was our acquisition of First Bank and Trust and resulting expansion into the Providence and Cranston market areas. Those markets, together with the Kent County market we will serve through our new Warwick branch, means that Washington Trust is geographically positioned to draw from a pool of 21,000 potential new business banking customers.

Our Commercial Lending area is succeeding in attracting new clients in this part of the state by providing multi-million dollar financing to some well-known businesses.

The department's major accounts represent a cross-section of the state's major industries, ranging from real estate and hospitality to manufacturing and biomedical technology.

Washington Trust became a player in the redevelopment of historic downtown Providence in 2002 when we provided a commercial mortgage for Alice Group, LLC, owner of The Alice Building at 236-250 Westminster Street. Located just a few blocks from our Providence branch, the renovated building is now comprised of 38 loft-style apartments on its upper floors and retail space at street level. As financier for this project, Washington Trust joins a group of public and private entities that have invested a total of more than $1 billion to rejuvenate this historically significant section of Rhode Island's capital city.

Dominion Diagnostics, a biomedical technology company located near our North Kingstown branch in the Quonset-Davisville Port and Commerce Park, is an example of a business banking relationship that includes commercial loans and equipment leasing. And our relationship with the company doesn't stop there – a number of their 60+ employees became personal banking customers by opening new personal accounts and obtaining mortgages.

To best serve this growing and increasingly diverse client base, we made additions and enhancements to our suite of business products and services. Through

Other upgrades to this service include email alerts for account activity and enhancements to the online bill payment system. Venerable Westerly, R.I.-based coffee and pastry manufacturer/retailer Bess Eaton had an innovative idea: to be the first company of its kind to introduce the concept of selling hot glazed doughnuts to its market area. To establish an important first foothold, Bess Eaton designed a flagship store centered on a large bake shop, complete with a glassed-in viewing area where customers could watch the production process. To finance this new phase of Bess Eaton's business, Washington Trust provided its long-time client with a commercial loan in 2002. Now, when the "heart" light comes on, passers-by know that the hot doughnuts are ready.

program is becoming popular with business owners who want to protect their cash flow and keep their lines of credit open; we are making the process easier for them by offering rapid pre-approval on leasing lines of credit.

To serve our customers who conduct business outside of the United States, we introduced a package of international trade services that are designed to help them to compete in the global marketplace. These include import and export letters of credit, documentary collection, international wire service, and foreign exchange services.

Existing business products and services experienced growth in 2002 as well. Working in partnership with retail banking and commercial lending, our merchant services area added more than 150 new businesses to the list of Washington Trust customers who use our merchant credit card processing services. This new business helped us to realize gains in merchant processing revenues, spurring our plans to expand the merchant services product line in 2003.

In 2002, Washington Trust financed long-time client Waterford Hotel Group's newest project, a Courtyard by Marriott hotel in Warwick, R.I. The rapid growth of Rhode Island's T.F. Green State Airport, coupled with the increasing popularity of the City of Providence as a convention and visitor destination, has created a growing need for hotel rooms and visitor amenities in the Greater Providence-Warwick area.

Thanks to new changes in our market area, we were able to embrace new business opportunities in municipal services. Municipal governments and state agencies from Westerly to East Providence have turned to us for services such as short-term investments, checking accounts, and trust and asset management. With the potential for more new business in 2003, plans are underway to expand the range of products we provide to this specialized market.

By working together on sales calls to potential new clients, cross-selling our products and services, and brainstorming new ideas, our professionals proved that teamwork turned the key that unlocked the opportunities we enjoyed in business banking in 2002.

Phoenix Investment Management, acquired by Washington Trust in 2000, has been providing investment management services to individuals and institutions since 1988.

During a period of very high market volatility, Phoenix proved once again that financial counsel is not about promises, but performance. Phoenix Investment Management's equity composite, fixed income composite, and balanced fund composite outperformed the leading market indices and the mutual fund universe in their respective categories in 2002, just as they did in 2000 and 2001.

Looking forward to 2003, Phoenix remains focused on preserving and increasing the real value of clients' capital and generating adequate cash flow for their individual needs through intensive and effective asset management.

Despite a challenging investment climate, our Phoenix Investment Management division realized further growth. It was a year marked by strong performance results and the division's best year for new business, as individual investors and organizations alike recognized the value of turning to seasoned money managers with proven track records.

A new Phoenix Investment Management client, St. Elizabeth Community operates nursing homes in East Greenwich, Bristol and Providence, R.I. Phoenix manages St. Elizabeth's employee pension fund and endowment. Here at the new East Greenwich facility, a client enjoys the company of a resident pet. St. Elizabeth's is also renovating a building in Providence that will become an affordable assisted-living facility.

With offices in Westerly, Narragansett and Providence, our Trust & Investment Services division is positioned to provide professional, client-driven asset management, financial planning and fiduciary services to clients throughout Rhode Island and southeastern Connecticut.

Services area supported the organization's work by co-sponsoring a series of seminars that were aimed at educating the nonprofit community and their professional advisors about issues in asset management and trust services.

The division continues to offer quality service by coordinating professional advisors, fiduciary services and administrative support. We remain committed to a management philosophy that is focused on long-term results.

In 2002, our Trust & Investment

Services division succeeded in attracting new clients. Both nonprofit organizations and private investors increasingly turned to our financial experts, whose track records demonstrate that they can set long-term goals, create a plan to reach those goals, and measure their success.

To meet the needs of an expanding client base, our Trust & Investment Services division embraced the opportunity to enhance client service. The division accomplished this by making operational improvements, such as upgrading software and technologies, augmenting employee training, and improving the Bank's visibility in the nonprofit arena.

One good example is our expanded relationship with the Rhode Island Foundation, a statewide foundation that utilizes private philanthropy from a wide range of donors to meet the needs of the communities it serves. In addition to serving as one of the Rhode Island Foundation's money managers, our Trust & Investment

the Women's Fund OF RHODE ISLAND

In November of 2002, Washington Trust was the gold sponsor of the Rhode Island Foundation's Women's Forum, an event that introduced a comprehensive study of the status of women in Rhode Island to more than 400 of the state's business, civic and political leaders. The Women's Fund, whose mission is to advance equity and social justice for women and girls, is a field of interest fund at the Rhode Island Foundation.

At Washington Trust we know that, more than anything else, helping people today means providing exceptional service backed by knowledge, experience and personal attention to detail.

Key to our success was the yearlong promotion of a low rate home equity line of credit. As a result, our home equity lines increased by 44% over 2001.

Washington Trust's core deposits set a new record, exceeding $1 billion, thanks in part to the acquisition of First Bank and Trust. A bank-wide marketing campaign, launched to promote our new presence in Providence and Cranston, stimulated new business throughout our market area and attracted additional dollars from both new and existing customers.

The Bank's website, www.washtrust.com, took on a new look and feel in 2002, aimed at improving navigation and offering online loan applications. The site's new Financial Resources section includes articles on subjects pertaining to personal banking, business banking, trust services, and investment services. It also includes a short

With mortgage rates dipping to 40-year lows in 2002, Washington Trust's retail lending department enjoyed a record year, doubling the projections set forth at the beginning of the year and exceeding the record set in 2001 by nearly one-third.

As we entered the traditionally busy late spring and summer months, we successfully introduced our mortgage and home equity line products in our new markets in the greater Providence area and central Rhode Island. While home equity loan/line business was burgeoning throughout our market area, an important portion of that business can be attributed to our new presence in the cities of Providence and Cranston, R.I.

Housing additions and home improvements were popular with our customers in 2002, as they took advantage of historically low interest rates and skyrocketing home values to refinance or obtain home equity loans and lines of credit.
