News Release - SingTel extends broadband IP backbone via satellite to Bangladesh

Attached is a news release made by Singapore Telecommunications Limited on the above.

NR 26Feb04.pdf

Submitted by Chan Su Shan (Ms), Company Secretary on 26/02/2004 to the SGX

News Release

SingTel extends broadband IP backbone via satellite to Bangladesh

Network supports a host of broadband Internet and multimedia services

Dhaka, 26 February 2004 – Singapore Telecommunications Limited (SingTel) today announced that it has introduced its broadband IP backbone to Internet Service Providers, broadcasters, educational institutions and multinational companies in Bangladesh.

This is part of SingTel's efforts in building a broadband IP backbone via satellite in the region. In Bangladesh, SingTel is working with Advance Technology Computers Limited (ATCL) to market this broadband IP service.

Known as Digital Video Broadcasting-Internet Protocol (DVB-IP), the network packages IP traffic (including voice, video, Internet-based applications and other online content) into a DVB stream before transmission via satellite to multiple sites in the Asia Pacific simultaneously. It supports broadband Internet connectivity, videoconferences, multimedia video streaming, high-speed file transfer, interactive distance learning and content distribution.

DVB-IP combines the best of Internet technology with the simultaneous global reach of satellites to deliver instant access to an Internet backbone. Service providers enjoy significant cost savings on satellite bandwidth compared to the traditional point-to-point technology via terrestrial network where links have to be dedicated and repeated for each remote site.

SingTel's Broadband DVB-IP network operates via the ST-1 and APSTAR satellites with a footprint covering the Asia Pacific region, supporting all its broadband users especially in South Asia. It connects to SingTel Internet Exchange, SingTel's Internet hubbing business which provides Internet systems and network management solutions to web-centric companies looking to outsource the hosting of their Internet operations.

Mr Tay Chek Khoon, SingTel's Vice President (Regional Satellite Business), said: "Broadband DVB-IP opens up a whole new horizon for traditional broadcasters to deliver more than just television signals and programming. The service provides an opportunity for broadcasters, ISPs and corporations to collaborate and deliver premium Internet content and applications such as interactive streaming media, long distance e-learning, online banking and even e-mail, to audiences in the region that do not have easy access to the Internet."

He added: "SingTel sees a huge growth potential in the Bangladeshi telecommunications market and is well-positioned to tap this new development."

SingTel offers a wide range of satellite-based services in the Asia Pacific region, such as VSAT, broadcast uplink/downlink as well as satellite bandwidth leasing services.
