InBev closes strategic partnership with Gabriel Sedlmayr Spaten-Franziskaner Bräu KGaA ("Spaten")

Brussels, October 1, 2004 – The strategic partnership with Gabriel Sedlmayr Spaten-Franziskaner Bräu KGaA ("Spaten"), which combines Spaten's beer business with Interbrew Deutschland, is closed as of today. All brewery operations of the Spaten-Franziskaner-Löwenbräu-Group (Munich) are now part of Interbrew Deutschland. The acquisition of the Dinkelacker-Schwaben Bräu (Stuttgart) and Mauritius (Zwickau) breweries is expected to close on October 4, 2004.

The partnership with Spaten makes InBev's affiliate, Interbrew Deutschland, the number two brewer in Germany's domestic market, with an 11% market share. This strategic partnership strengthens Interbrew Deutschland's geographic presence in all the important segments of the German beer market. Based on total sales, including export volumes of Beck's[®], among others, Interbrew Deutschland is now the number one German brewer.

"We are delighted to have achieved the closing of this partnership within the timeframe we predicted," commented InBev's CEO, John Brock. "Spaten not only gives us a strong position in southern Germany, it also adds some very attractive brands with great international potential to our portfolio. Going forward, Germany remains very much in our strategic focus."

Strategic rationale

Germany is a key strategic market. It is Europe's largest beer market, and it is consolidating. InBev's aim is to be number 1 or number 2 in every market where it is present, with a balanced portfolio of outstanding brands. InBev entered the German market in 2001. With breweries in Bremen, Issum, Hannover, Braunschweig and Wernigerode, and a national sales, marketing and distribution structure, Interbrew Deutschland has outperformed market growth and lifted margins. The company's new brands, together with its national lager brands, Beck's[®] and Hasseröder[®], its regional brands Gilde[®], Haake-Beck[®] and Wolters[®], and its leading Altbier brand, Diebels[®], further enhance its strength in the German market.

While Interbrew Deutschland already had a strong brand portfolio, modern breweries, and a high-quality national distribution network, there were two areas where it needed to reinforce its presence: in the Weissbier segment, and in southern Germany. Combining Spaten's brewing interests with Interbrew Deutschland has filled these gaps, and provides a powerful platform for additional cross-selling, top-line volume growth, and further margin improvement. Franziskaner[®] gives Interbrew Deutschland a strong position in the popular Weissbier segment.

Headquartered in Munich and tracing its origins back to 1363, Spaten is the leading brewer in Bavaria; Dinkelacker-Schwaben Bräu AG ("Dinkelacker") in Stuttgart is a leading brewer in Baden-Württemberg. They have a strong set of brands, including Franziskaner[®], Spaten[®] and Löwenbräu[®], two leading Bavarian "Helles" lager brands; and Dinkelacker[®], a leading lager in Baden-Württemberg. They have breweries in Munich, Stuttgart and Zwickau and strong regional sales, marketing and distribution structures.

Spaten's and Dinkelacker's brands are leaders in Bavaria and Baden-Württemberg, with market shares of 7% and 10%, respectively, within the off-trade channel. Franziskaner® and Löwenbräu® have a national presence and significant international potential.

The combination with Spaten means that Interbrew Deutschland now has a leading representation in the six key segments of the German beer market: national premium lagers, national specialties, national core lagers, regional core lagers, regional specialties, and beer-mix.
