Flughafen Wien AG: Optimistic forecasts for traffic growth in 2005

Flughafen Wien AG is looking toward the New Year with considerable optimism. The global upturn in the aviation industry is expected to remain strong throughout 2005. If there are no major disruptions, Vienna International Airport could record increases of 8% in the number of passengers and 5% each in flight movements and maximum take-off weight (MTOW) during 2005.

These optimistic forecasts are supported by expected growth in travel to Eastern Europe and long-haul flights to the Far East as well as the positive development of low-cost carriers.

Traffic results for 2004 will be presented on 17 January 2005 at 10 am during a press conference in the Radisson SAS Palais Hotel in the First District of Vienna.
