PSA Peugeot Citroën to expand its Trnava plant in Slovakia

PSA Peugeot Citroën has today contacted the Slovak authorities to let them know that the Trnava plant has been selected as the future site for a new manufacturing unit with a potential production capacity of 150,000 vehicles per year.

The additional production capacity will be dedicated to an entirely new vehicle to be marketed alongside existing models. The new car, despite its completely different design concept, will be built on the same platform as the plant's other vehicles, and will be added to the PSA Peugeot Citroën product offer in 2010.

The project will require an investment of roughly €350 million in Slovakia and create some 1,800 jobs.

The new investment will extend PSA Peugeot Citroën's Trnava plant, whose foundation was laid in June 2003. In the start-up phase, the facility will, in 2006, make platform 1 vehicles (small cars), with an annual capacity of 300,000 units on three shifts and a workforce of around 3,500 people.
