Independent Auditor's Report

Mr. M. Tsuchiya
Pacific Advisory Group of America, L.L.C.

I have audited the accompanying balance sheet of Pacific Advisory Group of America, L.L.C. (a single member, limited liability company) as of December 31, 2004, and the related statements of income, accumulated deficit, and cash flows for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of Company's management. My responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on my audit.

I conducted my audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that I plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. I believe that my audit provides a reasonable basis for my opinion.

In my opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Pacific Advisory Group of America, L.L.C. as of December 31, 2004, and results of its operations and cash flows for the year then ended in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

My audit was conducted for the purpose of forming an opinion on the basic financial statements taken as a whole. The Computation of Net Capital Under SEC Rule 15c3-1 and Statement of Member's Capital are presented for purposes of additional analysis and is not a required part of the basic financial statements. Such information has been subjected to the auditing procedures applied in the basic financial statements and, in my opinion, is fairly stated in all material respects in relation to the basic financial statements taken as a whole.

Notes to Financial Statements

December 31, 2004

1. Organization

Pacific Advisory Group of America, L.L.C. (the Company) was organized by M. Tsuchiya. The Company operates similar to a corporation, however it is taxed on M. Tsuchiya's individual income tax return. Thus, the income taxes paid, if any, during the calendar year are included as expenses.

The Company provides financial advisory services for merger and acquisition transactions to clients primarily located in Japan and the United States. All of the revenue arises from fees from three customers. As a nature of the Company's business and its size, the share among the sources of revenue varies year by year.

2. Operations

The Company prepares its financial statements using the accrual method of accounting. Revenues are recognized when clients are invoiced which is normally when services have been rendered and contracts have been completed. Expenses are recorded when incurred.

The process of preparing financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires use of estimates and assumptions regarding certain types of assets, liabilities, revenues and expenses. Such estimates primarily relate to unsettled transactions as of the date of the financial statements. Accordingly, upon settlement, actual results may differ from estimated amounts.

The Company rents its Los Angeles space on a monthly basis for $2,000 per month.

Certain business expenses are paid by the Company credit card and have been recorded as accounts payable.

The Company considers cash and cash equivalents to include time deposits with maturities of 90 days or less for the statement of cash flows.

3. Related Party Transactions

The Company paid M. Tsuchiya a salary of $54,000 along with commissions of $3,953.

During the year, M. Tsuchiya contributed capital from personal funds which amounted to $49,500.

M. Tsuchiya, Sole Shareholder
Pacific Advisory Group of America, L.L.C.

In planning and performing my audit of the financial statements of Pacific Advisory Group of America, L.L.C. (PAGA), for the year ended December 31, 2004, I considered its internal control structure, including procedures for safeguarding securities, in order to determine my auditing procedures for the purpose of expressing my opinion on the financial statements and not to provide assurance on the internal control structure.

Also, as required by rule 17a-5(g)(1) of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), I have made a study of the practices and procedures followed by PAGA, including tests of such practices and procedures that I considered relevant to the objectives stated in rule 17a-5(g), in the following.

1. Making the periodic computations of aggregate indebtedness (or aggregate debits) and net capital under rule 17a-3(a)(11) and the reserve required by rule 15c3-3(e).

The management of PAGA is responsible for establishing and maintaining an internal control structure and the practices and procedures referred to in the preceding paragraph. In fulfilling this responsibility, estimates and judgments by management are required to assess the expected benefits and related costs of internal control structure policies and procedures, and of the practices and procedures referred to in the preceding paragraph, and to assess whether those practices and procedures can be expected to achieve the SEC's above-mentioned objectives. Two of the objectives of an internal control structure and the practices and procedures are to provide management with reasonable but not absolute assurance that assets for which PAGA has responsibility are safeguarded against loss from unauthorized use or disposition, and that transactions are executed in accordance with management's authorization and recorded properly to permit the preparation of financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. Rule 17a-5(g) lists additional objectives to the practices and procedures listed in the preceding paragraph.

Because of inherent limitations in any internal control structure or the practices and procedures referred to above, errors or irregularities may occur and not be detected. Also, projection of any evaluation of them to future periods is subject to risk that they may become inadequate because of changes in conditions or that the effectiveness of their design and operation may deteriorate. My consideration of the internal control structure would not necessarily disclose all matters in the internal control structure that might be material weaknesses under standards established by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

A material weakness is a condition in which the design or operation of the specific internal control structure elements does not reduce to a relatively low level the risk that errors or irregularities in amounts that would be material in relation to the financial statements being audited may occur and not be detected within a timely period by employees in the normal course of performing their assigned functions. However, I noted no matters involving the internal control structure, including procedures for safeguarding securities, that I consider to be material weaknesses as defined above.

I understand that practices and procedures that accomplish the objectives referred to in the second paragraph of this report are considered by the SEC to be adequate for its purposes in accordance with the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and related regulations, and that practices and procedures that do not accomplish such objectives in all material respects indicate a material inadequacy for such purposes. Based on this understanding and on my study, I believe that PAGA's practices and procedures were adequate at December 31, 2004, to meet the Commission's objectives.

This report is intended solely for the information and use of the Stockholder, management, the SEC, National Association of Securities Dealers, and other regulatory agencies that rely on rule 17a-5(g) under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 in their regulation of registered brokers and dealers, and should not be used for any other purpose.
