Press Release

FJH extends position in growth market of migration

- Orders from Germany and Switzerland
- Migration order volume grows by just under 4 million Euro

Munich, 30 April 2007 – Insurance software and consultancy specialist FJH AG has enjoyed a good start to 2007 with its migration business. So far, it has secured new orders with a total volume of just under 4 million Euro. Provinzial Rheinland Lebensversicherung AG and a further three renowned German insurance companies have decided to rely on support from FJH for their migration projects. FJH has also received a follow-up order from one customer for whom it successfully completed a migration project in 2006. A key customer in Switzerland has also extended its cooperation with FJH. The total volume represents around 3.5 million Euro in services and approximately 0.5 million Euro in licence fees, much of which will count towards turnover for 2007.

Extensive experience in the migration of insurance portfolios

The FJH Group has a wealth of experience in migration projects and offers tried and tested migration software tools through its FJA MigSys and FJH MigArchiv systems. The FJA MigSys migration system facilitates migration from any source system into any target system. It also covers the vital issue of migration controlling.

Migrating the history of insurance policies to a new policy administration system represents a major challenge for migration projects. The FJA MigArchiv archiving system offers a proven information system for historic policy statuses. These new orders mean MigSys is now being successfully used in 12 policy migration projects.

Growing significance of migration for the insurance sector

These new orders continue FJH's promising development in the field of migration. Migration is becoming an increasingly important topic for both the German and the European insurance industries. Mergers and the continuing pressure for product innovations – caused, not least, by the combined offers now coming from the banking and insurance sector – are requiring insurance groups to consolidate their systems. Policy migrations are a key element of these activities. With its excellent reputation on the market for the planning and analysis of migration strategies, FJH expects to secure further orders in future.
