InBev Celebrates Bartending Excellence

11th edition of the Stella Artois® World Draught Master Competition

The 11th edition of the Stella Artois® World Draught Master Competition - a contest that rewards the world’s best pourer of Belgian beers - took place today in the Stella Artois brewery in Leuven, the hometown of Stella Artois®. InBev brought together 24 international finalists for the competition, which is the highlight of 12 months hard work in training bartenders from all over the world. This year’s Stella Artois® World Draught Master title has been awarded to Erin Carroll – New Zealand (1st place winner), Mozhalov Denys – Ukraine (1st runner-up) and Kate Gow – Australia (2nd runner-up).

First held in 1997, the Stella Artois® World Draught Master Competition assembles the best bartenders from around the world to rate their tapping skills, bottle-pouring finesse and table-serving protocol when it comes to serving Belgian beers. Every step of a competitor’s attempt to perform the “perfect pour” is carefully scrutinized by a panel of expert judges.

Always a fight to the finish, the competition heralds the importance of the Stella Artois® 9-step pouring ritual: a cleaning process, the position of the tap (not touching the beer, head or glass), the size of the head (no higher than two fingers), and a careful re-dipping of the glass in cool water to restore its proper drinking temperature – all of which ensure that a Stella Artois® will always taste its best. Even the shape of the brand’s signature chalice glass is chosen to release all of the beer’s multi-textured aromas.

This annual contest welcomes the winners of locally-held contests from more than 24 countries - from Kazakhstan to Hong Kong - a broad spectrum of international Stella Artois® brand ambassadors who reflect the widespread global appeal of Belgium’s premium lager.

Ligia Goncalves, Stella Artois® Global Brand Director says: “Without a doubt, a well-poured beer adds something special to the experience, which is why we are so proud to have today our yearly Stella Artois® World Draught Master competition, celebrating the fine art of pouring a perfect chalice of the world’s most popular Belgian beer.”

This year’s competition participants came from: Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Gibraltar, Greece, Hong Kong, Hungary, Israel, Italy, Kazakhstan, Luxembourg, New Zealand, Romania, Russia, Singapore, South Africa, UK, Ukraine and the United States.

Pictures of the winners will be available on www.inbev.com.
