To Whom It May Concern:

On 3/17/95 I opened an account with Invesco Mutual Fund account 7HYPX #3342937192 through Schwab, I invested $40,000 to purchase shares 6125.574 at NAV 6.53. The average monthly Dividend Income was $250-$300 Jerry Paul managed this High Yield Bond Fund. In Nov 2002? another manager took over & average Dividend was $150 per month. Principal dropped to $23,000 when Invesco merged with Aim (account #100708697) in 11/3/03. Invesco shares were 6130.988 sold and bought Aim at NAV 4.29 share 5487.876 - which have never been sold. Average monthly Dividend each year with Aim dropped - $150 - $140 - $130 - now.

During the time a new Invesco manager took over from Jerry Paul around 11/02 or 03 I could not live on the meager income from Invesco Dividends. I contacted my U.S. Senator and provided documents. Not meaning to, inadvertently Invesco investment document seemed to be focused on some time after a gentleman called on the phone asking me if I had invested in Invesco through Charles Schwab? I answered "yes" and that was all that was said. Some years later I received notices of lawsuits against Invesco and Aim. I don't know if there's a connection with my contacting my United States Senator but perhaps there is. Charles Schwab too was in the news at that time.

I hope you consider all these things in Distributions of settlement monies. Thank you for your time & effort I'm very poor, sick & old and deserving. Jori Martin
