

Dear SEC –

Entrepreneurship, start-ups are the backbone of our countries ability to generate new economic growth and jobs. It's no secret that we desperately need to create more jobs.

The banks are not lending without significant collateral and entrepreneurs have to resort to very creative methods to fundraise.

In regards to the petition for rulemaking change #4-605, I support this rule change fully.

As a small business owner and former adjunct professor of Entrepreneurship and Small Business Management at Miami International University,

I think this rule change will greatly help some small business owners and entrepreneurs in their pursuit of funding.

Perhaps limiting the investment amount per individual to $1,000 would be a good idea; however, I think people are intelligent enough to make their own investment decisions, particularly when it comes to risk capital in small amounts.

Feel free to contact me should you require further information or if I can be of assistance in any way.

Kind Regards,
