Re: Pay Ratio Disclosure, File No. S7-07-13

Dear Ms. Murphy,

I very strongly support regulations that would require publicly-traded companies to disclose CEO-to-median worker pay ratios. As income inequality reaches unprecedented heights, the public has the right to know which corporations are fueling the yawning gap between rich and poor.

Disclosure of CEO-to-worker pay ratios are also crucial for investors. This information is important for determining whether corporations are diverting resources to executives at the expense of long-term investments and workforce development. Additionally, investors need to be able to gauge whether executives' compensation is falling in line with their performance.

If the executive doesn't like losing a little of their income privacy, then they can resign. The revelation and transparency comes with the territory. They are so highly overcompensated that I don't see anyone resigning over this rule.

Sincerely,

Roger Ludke
