Re: Pay Ratio Disclosure, File No. S7-07-13

Dear Ms. Murphy,

Many of the highest paid CEO fear letting the public know the amount of their true income. They fear that their greed, avarice and deceptions will be revealed. That their fortunes are in part due to denying employees wages that force them to seek government welfare.

I strongly support regulations that would require publicly-traded companies to disclose CEO-to-median worker pay ratios. As income inequality reaches unprecedented heights, the public has the right to know which corporations are fueling the yawning gap between rich and poor.

Disclosure of CEO-to-worker pay ratios are also crucial for investors. This information is important for determining whether corporations are diverting resources to executives at the expense of long-term investments and workforce development. Additionally, investors need to be able to gauge whether executives' compensation is falling in line with their performance.

Sincerely,

Shelley Booth
