Re: Pay Ratio Disclosure, File No. S7-07-13

Dear Ms. Murphy,

I am an investor.

I am an investor in individual stocks and ETFs and also in mutual funds, so I, quite literally, have a vested interest in knowing -- and in the people who select the companies my funds invest in knowing -- how much executives have paid themselves vis-a-vis the amount that they pay the people who carry out the work of the enterprise.

I strongly support regulations that would require publicly-traded companies to disclose CEO-to-median worker pay ratios. As income inequality reaches unprecedented heights, the public has the right to know which corporations are fueling the yawning gap between rich and poor.

Disclosure of CEO-to-worker pay ratios are also crucial for investors. This information is important for determining whether corporations are diverting resources to executives at the expense of long-term investments and workforce development. Additionally, investors need to be able to gauge whether executives' compensation is falling in line with their performance.

Sincerely,

Edward Allan
