To whom it may concern,

I heard of a proposed new regulation governing mutual fund (Rule 30e-3) that would eliminate the current default requirement for such investment funds to distribute information to investors in paper form, making electronic delivery the default delivery option instead of mail delivery.

My name is Mary Wells and I have money invested in my retirement savings program as well as investment in an Edward Jones account. I rely on my investment statement via USPS mail as well as other investors who may not have access to electronic services. Mail delivery is universally available and it provides the broadest access to all recipients. It should be the default option for information distribution.

Additionally, online-only access to investment information could open up numerous security issues for the countless Americans who prefer the safety, security and privacy that they use of the Postal Service has provided for hundreds of years.

Please allow myself and the many other Americans the ability to receive their investment funds statement via USPS mail rather than electronic delivery.

Thank you in advance,
