Dear Brent J. Fields,

I am writing to you to reconsider the SEC ruling on going paperless. Numerous citizens have investments through. We all understand the direction the country and world is headed, but take note there are still numerous people in the mountain state who use land phones to access sensitive information.

Numerous states still don't have high speed internet. It's about all the older folks. In my personal opinion, it's before the horse.

Please consider my thoughts on this and I would like to see this to catch the country up with their resources at land phones, and tablets first before pulling the trigger on this.

Thanks again
