Dear Murphy-

Our government does not need to interfere with how large corporations are run. Whatever happens to these companies will affect small businesses as well. The shareholder proxy access rule change will bring us one step closer to the government having far too much authority in an area that needs to be left alone. Whether they are large or small, all businesses will be hurt by the proposed rule change.

As soon as liberal special interest groups are in the boardroom, the running of the companies in question will be affected. Our boards will not be able to see to the day to day business of their companies if they are engaged in internal disputes and individual agendas. They are sure to experience losses, which will in turn mean price increases for the rest of us.

My brother and I have owned Moore Brothers Auto-Truck Repair for twenty-seven years. We have never seen times as tough as they are right now. Things have become so bad that we no longer have the three employees we used to have. Right now, it is just the two of us working in our shop. If prices go up, it will have a devastating impact on our business. People are not spending money right now, and if we have to increase our charges, we will lose even more customers.

Our corporations are the working backbone of this country. They supply us with the products we need to maintain our businesses, not to mention thousands of jobs. They need to remain stable, and they need to be able to keep their costs down if we are going to make it through this recession. For the sake of my business and all business, I do not support the proposal to change the shareholder proxy access rule.

Sincerely yours,

Don Moore
