Dear Ms. Murphy:

The proposed shareholder proxy access rule change will not benefit America's businesses. Businesses in America are already failing during our country's economic dilemma, so we do not need any changes made that will make the situation worse. Unfortunately, this rule change will do just that.

After owning a business for twenty years, I can honestly say that my business is suffering due to our country's struggle with money. My company sells landscaping equipment, so we have also been hurt by the drought in my area. For the last five years, the economy and the unfortunate lack of water in my area have made business very difficult.

Even though I am not associated with a publicly traded company, I still believe that this new proposal will not help small companies. From my own personal work experience, I am familiar with the shareholder proxy access rule, and there are so many other things that are more important for the government to focus on right now. This rule change will not help our economy or our businesses, so it should not be approved.

Yours truly,
