All portfolios are reviewed at least monthly for buildup of cash balances from dividend and capital gains distributions to determine an optimum reinvestment strategy. The mutual funds used to construct portfolios are monitored on a weekly and sometimes even on a daily basis as is dictated by market conditions. Additional reviews may be triggered by changes in market/economic conditions, changes in the performance of investments in client's accounts, deposits and withdrawals from the account, or changes in client's risk/return preferences or strategy.

Answer

Fees. CPIC manages client funds primarily by constructing customized portfolios of open-end “no-load” mutual funds. The fee for such services is calculated using the annual formula in the table below. The fee is prorated on a quarterly basis using the total net asset value (NAV) of the account at the beginning of the quarter and paid for the quarter in advance. The NAV includes the market value of all stocks, bonds, mutual funds, cash and cash equivalents, and any other securities held in the account. When requested, CPIC will purchase and/or hold stocks and bonds in the account for the convenience of the client, although this does not fit with CPIC’s stated investment strategy of monitoring and selecting no-load mutual fund shares.

Annual Management Fee

- a) 1.5% on the first $500,000 of NAV, plus
- b) 1.0% on the next $1.5 million of NAV, plus
- c) 0.75% on amounts in excess of $2.0 million of NAV.
- d) There is a one-time $150 set-up fee for new accounts.

Special fees may be negotiated on a case-by-case basis if, by reason of the composition of the account or unusual factors, more or less than the usual amount of management services are needed. In no event will CPIC’s asset management fee exceed 3.0% of assets under management. CPIC’s fees are in addition to the fees and expenses charged by each mutual fund and the brokerage firm or custodian (as such the client will pay several levels of fees). Regardless of the fees established by CPIC, lower fees for comparable services may be available from other advisors. CPIC’s fees are for discretionary asset management only, and CPIC does not offer or include financial planning, tax, or non-investment related consultation services (i.e. insurance, estate planning, etc.). CPIC principals offer members of their immediate families a discounted annual flat fee of 0.75% of NAV. CPIC manages employees’ accounts fee-free.

Refunds for terminated accounts. Either CPIC or the client may immediately terminate the asset management agreement with written notice to the other. Upon termination of the asset management agreement, a refund is provided to the client within 30 days for the pre-paid but unearned management fee which is calculated on a prorata basis for the partial quarter.

Fees and refunds for interim transactions. Clients will be charged a management fee for each deposit made by them during the quarter that exceeds $25,000 and for which the management fee calculated on a prorata basis for the remainder of the quarter exceeds $50. Likewise, clients will receive a refund of management fees for each withdrawal made by them during the quarter which exceeds $25,000 and for which the pre-paid but unearned management fee calculated on a prorata basis for the remainder of the quarter exceeds $50. Interim fees and refunds for the current quarter will appear on the next quarter’s billing statement.

Blended rate fees for multiple accounts. For purposes of reaching lower fee breakpoints in the fee schedule above, CPIC will calculate fees by aggregating all of client's accounts under common control or those of all immediate family members. All such accounts must be at the same broker, dealer, or custodian in order to receive the benefit of this blended rate policy, except in special rare circumstances where this requirement may be waived by CPIC. The combined NAV must be disclosed to all account holders to receive benefit of the blended rate fees policy.

Hourly services. Although it is not CPIC's normal practice, on extremely rare occasions CPIC might offer investment advisory services to clients on an hourly basis. The fee for such services would be negotiated and vary widely depending on the nature and complexity of the services authorized and performed. A retainer might be required. Refunds for hourly investment advisory services would be made to the client within 30 days to the extent that the retainer is larger than needed to cover hourly charges for services performed up to the point of termination.

Strategy and Methods of Analysis. CPIC's primary strategy is to develop a portfolio of "no-load" mutual funds for all client accounts. CPIC uses a variety of criteria to choose fund investments. These include but not limited to: expected global macroeconomic factors (GDP growth rates, inflation, political risk, interest rates, etc), relative expected performance (domestic vs. international), sector performance, AND an analysis of specific fund investments including past performance (over several recent time periods), risk (beta), risk adjusted return (alpha, Sharpe ratio), correlation to investments in the portfolio and various markets, currently favored market sectors, expenses (fund 12(b)1 fees and management expenses), and the asset allocation in client accounts desired to match client's preferred risk/return objectives and account restrictions.

Newsletter. CPIC publishes the quarterly newsletter CPIC Investment Perspectives, which provides an overview of the financial market's performance and CPIC's outlook for the future. This newsletter is provided to CPIC clients with their quarterly reports and is available online via the client side of our website (www.cpic.net) at no additional charge. Charts and performance history of certain mutual funds' prior performance are occasionally provided to our clients upon request at no charge ("past performance is no guarantee of future investment results.")

Educational Background Requirements. CPIC generally seeks to employ persons with educational and business backgrounds necessary to discharge their responsibilities effectively. No precise standards as to education or business background have been established for any position. However, CPIC expects that persons associated with it who will make investment decisions will likely have an MBA or MS degree (in economics or taxation), a CFP, CPA, CFA or similar certification, or equivalent work experience.

Policy for Trade Errors. Generally, a trading error is any trade actually executed in a client's account by CPIC (or any of its agents or employees) in error (whether or not the final outcome is to the client's benefit or detriment). An error includes, but is not limited to, buying or selling the wrong security, buying or selling the wrong amount of any security, or buying or selling any security in contravention to SEC rules and regulations (such as Reg T). In the event of a gain in client's account, the gain shall accrue to the benefit of the client. In the event of a loss in the client account, CPIC will transfer such funds from its own account as are necessary to make the client "whole," so they do not suffer any detrimental economic impact from CPIC's trading mistake.

Answer

- 7. Other business activities. Mr. Bonomo is a member of the Board of Directors of MedDev, a small, privately held medical device manufacturer based in Sunnyvale, CA. Mr. Bonomo spends, on average, less than 3 hours per month on behalf of MedDev.
- 9. Transactions in securities recommended to clients. Affiliated persons of CPIC may purchase the same debt instruments and shares of open-end investment companies (mutual funds) as are used in client accounts. These purchases do not require CPIC's approval as long as CPIC is not an adviser or sub-adviser to such investment company (at this time, CPIC is not an adviser or sub-adviser to any investment company). As these shares are purchased at net asset value (NAV), a conflict of interest normally does not exist. For an affiliated person's stock and bond purchases and securities purchased at other than NAV, CPIC maintains a strict insider trading policy that prohibits those affiliated with CPIC from trading on inside information. In keeping with CPIC's philosophy of using mutual funds for client accounts, it is not CPIC's policy to use securities which are only available in limited quantities (such as thinly-traded securities and IPOs) in client accounts, but in those extremely rare cases where CPIC might decide to use securities available only in limited quantities, all client accounts will receive equal consideration. CPIC maintains a Code of Ethics, which obligates CPIC employees and affiliates to always put clients' needs before either their own or CPIC. CPIC employees are required to report all personal securities transactions to CPIC, and CPIC reviews such reports regularly. Clients and prospective clients can obtain a copy of CPIC's Insider Trading Policy and Code of Ethics by submitting a request in writing addressed to CPIC International at CPIC's regular office address (see page 1 of this document) or via email at admin@cpic.net.
- 10. Conditions and restrictions for managing accounts. Asset management accounts generally require a minimum of $500,000 of assets under management under discretionary trading authority, unless this requirement is waived by CPIC. CPIC will accept reasonable and implementable client investment restrictions, but client should be aware that such restrictions may adversely affect investment performance and CPIC's ability to effectively manage client assets. Client may pay higher brokerage transaction fees and incur higher fund expenses as a result of such restrictions. CPIC does not normally accept non-discretionary accounts, but in the rare instance in which CPIC accepts a nondiscretionary account, client should be aware that this may adversely affect investment performance and CPIC's ability to effectively manage client assets (primarily resulting from CPIC's inability to reach client on a timely basis or include nondiscretionary accounts within block trades).

Investment discretion. Unless expressly negotiated otherwise, CPIC manages discretionary accounts in which CPIC makes all investment decisions without consulting client prior to each trade. Limitations on CPIC's authority to execute trades for discretionary asset management accounts are contained in the Limited Trading Authorization and the Limited Power of Attorney in CPIC's Asset Management Agreement (which must be signed by client to activate CPIC management).

Selection of brokerage firms and commission rates. Clients retain the full authority, and it is the client's sole decision, to choose the brokerage firm that will custody client's assets (this direction is called directed brokerage). For clients who do not have an account at a brokerage firm capable of trading a wide range of no-load mutual funds, CPIC recommends, but does not require, that clients consider a brokerage account at the Schwab Institutional division of Charles Schwab & Co., TD Ameritrade, or Fidelity Investments to maintain custody of client's assets and to effect trades in their accounts (this is often called "directed brokerage"). CPIC is independently owned and operated and not affiliated with Schwab, TD Ameritrade, or any other brokerage firm. CPIC seeks to recommend brokerage firms that offer a well developed institutional trading and custody platform and that meet "best execution" standards (this is ultimately a subjective assessment that generally includes both execution and non-execution products and services integrated into an institutional trading and custody platform). Best execution includes, but is not limited to, the breadth and flexibility of a firm's brokerage account offerings, the number and type of open-end "no-load" mutual funds offered, the commission rates charged to purchase and sell shares, the quality and speed of execution, the ability to offer CPIC quick access to client account information electronically, quality of trading systems, speed, accuracy, efficiency, quality of research, handling of trade errors, convenience of branch offices, and overall quality of service. The institutional divisions of the above named brokerage firms provide CPIC with access to institutional trading and services that are typically not available to retail investors (including brokerage, custody, pricing, research, market data, practice management aids, software and technology, and access to mutual funds and other investments otherwise available only to institutional investors or that would require a significantly higher minimum initial investment). These services are generally available to independent investment advisors at no charge subject to various account minimums set by each brokerage. The majority of CPIC's clients have chosen to custody their assets at Charles Schwab & Co. (See Schedule F, Items 13a & 13b for related disclosures).

When selecting a brokerage firm, client should consider the overall package of services that best meets client's needs (taking into consideration transaction fees and expenses, breadth of mutual fund offerings, minimum securities holding periods, reports quality, customer service, trades, breadth of services, handling of trade errors, convenience of local offices, advisor confidence, etc.). Client may direct CPIC to manage their account at a firm other than those mentioned above, provided that such broker/dealer/custodian has the capability to trade open-end no-load mutual fund securities and can provide CPIC with timely execution and information about client's account. No two brokerage firms offer exactly the same package of services and commission rates. Regardless of the brokerage chosen by client (including those recommended by CPIC), a disparity may exist between the commissions charged and services provided to clients who direct CPIC to use a particular brokerage firm and those who select another. Client may receive an "institutional" commission rate that is different than the broker's published retail rate (the institutional rate is often lower than broker's published retail rate). If client directs CPIC to use a broker or dealer other than those mentioned above, CPIC may not, under those circumstances, be able to negotiate the commission rate paid, and may not be able to obtain volume discounts or obtain services that meet CPIC's "best execution" standards. As a result of client directing CPIC to use a specific brokerage (including one of the firms mentioned above), costs and expenses may be higher, or services poorer, than client may be able to find elsewhere. Therefore, if client directs CPIC to use a particular broker-dealer or custodian, then client understands that: (i) CPIC's ability to achieve best execution may be partially or wholly limited by the "directed brokerage" arrangement because CPIC may not achieve executions of the nature, quality, speed, or price that it might otherwise achieve if it were not using a directed broker-dealer to execute transactions; (ii) CPIC will not be able to negotiate or renegotiate commission rates with a client's directed broker-dealer, or impact or improve the price or quality of the execution services provided; (iii) the client will not be able to participate in volume discount commission rates that may be negotiated by CPIC with broker-dealers that CPIC uses to effect trades for CPIC's other clients; and (iv) the client may forgo other benefits from savings on execution costs that may otherwise be obtained (e.g. by aggregating client orders).

For CPIC's client accounts maintained at a brokerage such as Schwab, TD Ameritrade, and Fidelity Investments, the brokerage generally does not charge separately for custody but is compensated by account holders through trading commissions and other transaction-related or asset-based fees for securities trades that are executed through the brokerage or that settle into the brokerage's accounts.

Within each brokerage, CPIC does not have specific authority to determine commission rates paid by client, but the choice of mutual funds selected by CPIC for client's account may affect the commission paid (this is because brokers assess commissions and fees on some fund purchases and sales while processing others with no commissions or fees). For CPIC's clients' accounts maintained at Charles Schwab & Co., TD Ameritrade and Fidelity Investments (and most other brokerage firms), these firms do not charge separately for custody but are compensated by account holders through commissions or other transaction-related fees for securities trades that are executed through them or that settle into their firms' accounts (in many cases, the brokerage firms are compensated directly by the mutual funds for "mutual fund marketplace" funds with "no transaction fee").

Investment strategy, risk of losses, and risks of trading in mutual funds. There is risk of loss when investing in CPIC's investment strategy, which generally uses a mix of no-load mutual funds to construct each client portfolio. Mutual funds contain stocks, bonds, and other securities. As such, the value of client's portfolio will fluctuate, and may decline for significant periods. Losses may be particularly acute during periods of extended negative stock or bond market performance. Regardless of a client's preferred investment objective, all account types can decline significantly in value—not just aggressive accounts, but also conservative, balanced, and income-oriented accounts. CPIC's investment strategy is a long-term plan and not appropriate for short-term investing. Remember, past performance is no guarantee of future investment results. Mutual fund share prices go up and down in value, so you should expect the total value of your account to fluctuate from day to day. CPIC's approach is a long-term investment program and is not appropriate for short-term investing. Investors should consider many factors before investing and should avoid placing too much emphasis on past performance when considering CPIC's investment approach. Future performance may be worse than past performance. Relying too heavily on past performance may lead to bad investment decisions and unrealistic expectations of future performance. The volatility of comparative indexes may be materially different from those of CPIC's accounts.

There are limitations in connection with trading mutual funds. Most funds reserve the right to redeem fund shares "in kind," if the mutual fund manager believes it is in the best interests of the fund (as might be the case during periods of market turmoil, for large redemptions, or a variety of other reasons). Thus, a shareholder in the fund (like a CPIC client) may receive shares of stocks, bonds, or other securities held by the fund in lieu of cash. Liquidating such securities would pose certain problems including valuation losses and the commission costs incurred. Many custodians, including T.D. Ameritrade, Fidelity Investments, and Schwab, maintain a redemption policy for funds that are purchased with "no transaction fee." Funds purchased with no transaction fee must be held for a minimum period of time (which varies with each broker and fund but is generally 60-180 days) from the date of purchase to avoid paying the broker's short-term redemption fee. Short-term redemption fees are generally based upon a percentage of trade principal and are usually subject to a minimum and maximum fee (the broker's fee schedules may be changed by the broker from time to time). Mutual funds also charge management and other fees which are deducted from the assets of the fund (the fees for each fund are described in the fund's prospectus). Since CPIC uses mutual funds in its clients' accounts, client will be paying both the management fees and expenses of the fund as well as CPIC's management fees. At the present time, CPIC does not offer "limited investment opportunities" such as IPO offerings and "thinly-traded securities" to its clients.

Products and services provided to CPIC by brokerage firms (including, but not limited to Charles Schwab & Co., TD Ameritrade, and Fidelity Investments). Brokerage firms often make available to CPIC products and services that benefit CPIC (for which CPIC would otherwise need to spend its own money), but which may not directly benefit clients' accounts. Some of these products and services assist CPIC in managing and administering clients' accounts. These include software, web sites, and other technology that provide access to client account data (such as trade confirmations and account statements), facilitate trade execution (and allocation of aggregated trade orders for multiple client accounts), provide research, pricing information and other market data, facilitate payment of CPIC's fees from its clients' accounts, and assist with back-office support, recordkeeping and client reporting. Many of these services are used to service all or a substantial number of CPIC's accounts, including accounts not maintained at the above-named brokerage firms. These brokerage firms may also provide CPIC with services intended to help CPIC manage and further develop its business enterprise. These services may include compliance, business, and legal consulting, publications, presentations, roundtables, and conferences on practice management, information technology, business succession, regulatory compliance, and marketing, and access to employee benefits providers, human capital consultants and insurance providers. In addition, brokerage firms may make available, arrange and/or pay for these services to CPIC by independent third-parties. Brokerage firms may discount or waive fees they would otherwise charge for some of these services or pay all or part of the fees of a third-party providing these services to CPIC. Brokers may also provide other benefits such as educational events or occasional business entertainment of CPIC personnel. CPIC makes extensive use of many of the products and services offered by brokerage companies. While as a fiduciary, CPIC endeavors to act in clients' best interests, CPIC's recommendation that clients maintain their assets at one of the above-named brokerage firms may be based in part on the benefit to CPIC of the availability of some of the foregoing products and services and not solely on the nature, cost or quality of custody and brokerage services provided by such brokerage firms. Though the value of such products and services is not a directly quantifiable factor in recommending any specific brokerage, a potential conflict of interest may therefore exist. The extent to which these products and services facilitate CPIC's ability to manage client accounts will also influence CPIC's recommendation.

Brokers, including those named above, also usually provide CPIC with access to its institutional trading and custody services, which are typically not available to those brokerage firms' retail research, securities pricing, market data, software, and other technology, article reprints, practice investors. At Schwab Institutional, the availability to CPIC of the foregoing products and services are usually available on an unsolicited basis at no charge so long as a total of at least $10 million of CPIC's clients' assets are maintained in accounts at Schwab Institutional. Schwab may provide CPIC with no-cost or discounted access to its services (including market management aids, investment newsletters, presentations, access to industry conference calls, and invitations to participate in on-site meetings, presentations, and/or events with research analysts and managers). The availability to CPIC of the foregoing services is often not otherwise contingent upon CPIC committing any specific amount of business (commissions, assets in custody, or amount of trading). Schwab's brokerage services include the execution of securities transactions, custody, research, and access to mutual funds and other investments that are otherwise generally available only to institutional investors or would require a significantly higher minimum initial investment.

At brokerage firms other than those mentioned above, the availability of a similar set of products and services are often available at a discount or at no charge so long as a certain minimum amount of assets are maintained, and is not contingent upon CPIC committing any specific amount of securities trades, business, or assets. Though CPIC does not specifically consider the availability of these products and services when selecting mutual funds for client accounts, these services may still exert an unintended influence on CPIC managers, and as such, a potential conflict of interest may therefore exist.

CPIC advertises its services on advisor referral websites and pays such sites for referrals to potential clients. The list of sites used by CPIC changes from time-to-time, but currently includes such sites as AllFinancialAdvisors.com. The fee varies from site to site, but is generally a fixed amount for each qualified potential client referred to CPIC.

Code of Ethics

CPIC maintains a Code of Ethics applicable to all persons affiliated with CPIC. CPIC's Code of Ethics requires CPIC's directors, officers and employees to act in the best interest of clients at all times. In order to ensure that each of these persons adheres to the highest standards of conduct and integrity in conducting business on behalf of CPIC clients, CPIC requires each person to sign a Securities Industry Agreement and Code of Ethics. Organization Structure CPIC is organized as a subchapter S corporation. As a result of CPIC's ownership and operational structure, CPIC does not have the ability to establish separation of all management and operational functions, and as such each principal and employee performs multiple functions. Certain critical functions, such as the administrative tasks related to securities trading in client accounts, are always reviewed by a CPIC principal.

Proxy Voting It is CPIC's policy NOT to vote proxies on client's behalf. The right to vote proxies remains solely with client.

Disaster Recovery CPIC maintains a Disaster Recovery plan designed to allow CPIC to resume its business operations from another location should CPIC's office become inaccessible. The nature and extent of the disaster would determine how quickly CPIC would be able to resume regular operations.

Changes in Client's Financial Position Client bears a responsibility to notify CPIC in a timely manner of any change in their financial situation or risk/return preferences, or of any other change to the restrictions or guidelines CPIC should use in managing client's accounts.

Donated Services CPIC may from time to time donate a pre-packaged financial service (e.g. a time-limited financial consultation or portfolio analysis, a specified period of asset management service, or some combination thereof) to charities or non-profit groups. Such pre-packaged services are typically auctioned at the charity's fund-raising events. All auction proceeds are retained by the charity. CPIC receives no financial compensation or other direct benefit from the charity or non-profit as a result of its donation, but CPIC may receive a marketing benefit if the winner of the service later chooses to become a CPIC client.
