First, we have a third-party portfolio management system, INDATA IMS, that enables us to perform a pre-trade compliance check on every account cued in a transaction. If a trade triggers a compliance violation the portfolio management system alerts the portfolio manager before the trade can be sent to the trading blotter for execution. A Daily Trade Summary report is available for review by all portfolio managers as well. The system also generates reports detailing portfolio characteristics, trading history/activity, trade allocation, performance calculation, and a host of other features all aimed at allowing us to analyze and monitor client portfolios. Portfolio managers are required to review client portfolios after every trade to ensure that client portfolios are invested to reflect current investment strategies and within client specific guidelines. The following represent examples of the Investment Committees position on some of the more common current issues: 1. Greenmail: The Investment Committee would not support a company's ability to buy back shares from a particular shareholder at a price above the market in order to "buy-off" potential raiders at the expense of other shareholders. 2. Anti-takeover: As in the case with Greenmail, the Investment Committee would not support anti-takeover measures offered by management because such conditions may limit opportunities for shareholders to realize the highest value for their investment. 3. Auditors: The committee will generally support management's selection of independent auditors. 4. Board of Directors: In order to provide expanded perspective and expertise, the committee favors moves to expand the participation of directors who are not employees or closely associated with the company. 5. Management Proposals: The committee will analyze proposals such as executive compensation, stock option plans, Director indemnification, etc., on a case by case basis. The range of potential proxy voting measures is certainly much wider and potentially more complex than the examples provided above.
