Advisory Business

Firm Description

Marketfield Asset Management, LLC was organized as a limited liability company under the laws of the State of New York in October 2006 and has offices in New York, New York. Marketfield is registered as an investment advisor with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission. Marketfield is owned by Oscar Gruss & Son Incorporated, a New York corporation that is registered as a broker-dealer with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Types of Advisory Services

Marketfield currently furnishes investment advisory services to two investment funds, which are managed using a similar strategy. This strategy is tailored to the investment objectives of the funds. The funds do not impose restrictions on investing in particular securities or types of securities. The funds participate in two wrap-fee arrangements, and Marketfield receives a portion of the wrap fee for its investment management services.

Assets Under Management

As of December 31, 2011, Marketfield managed approximately $1,295,000,000 in client assets. All assets are managed on a fully discretionary basis.

Fees and Compensation

Marketfield Fund

Marketfield provides investment advisory services to Marketfield Fund, which is a separate series of Trust for Professional Managers, an open-end management investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940. Shares of Marketfield Fund are offered by means of a written prospectus. Marketfield earns a management fee from the fund equal to 1.40% per annum of net assets, payable on a monthly basis in arrears. This advisory fee is accrued daily in the calculation of the net asset value of the fund. Fees are paid from fund assets under the supervision of the administrator of the fund, U.S. Bancorp Fund Services, LLC.

From fund assets are deducted all fund operating expenses, including our advisory fee and other customary fund expenses. No distribution fees, also known as 12b-1 fees, are currently deducted. Marketfield has contractually agreed to waive its management fees and/or to reimburse expenses of the fund to ensure that total annual fund operating expenses (exclusive of taxes, leverage, interest, brokerage commissions, expenses incurred in connection with any merger or reorganization, dividends on short positions, acquired fund fees and expenses, and extraordinary and non-recurring expenses, such as litigation) do not exceed 1.75% of average annual net assets.

The Marketfield Fund, Ltd.

Marketfield provides investment advisory services to The Marketfield Fund, Ltd., an exempted company organized under the laws of the Cayman Islands. The investment strategies of Marketfield Fund and The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. are generally executed on a pari passu basis. In general, Marketfield is entitled to receive a management fee, payable monthly in arrears, in an amount equal to the sum of the monthly amounts resulting from the product of (1) the adjusted net asset value for each class of shares in the fund as of the last day of the month and (2) one-twelfth of the annual rate of 1.40%. Investors who have invested $100 million or more in the fund are assessed the management fee at a reduced annual rate of 1.20%. Fees are paid from fund assets under the supervision of the administrator of the fund, U.S. Bancorp Fund Services, LLC.

The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. bears its own expenses, including but not limited to the management fee, a fee payable to the administrator of the fund, investment expenses, and other customary expenses, all as described in more detail in the confidential private placement memorandum relating to the offering and sale of shares in the fund. An offering of shares in the fund may be made only pursuant to the terms in the confidential private placement memorandum and where permitted by law.

Shares in The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. are offered exclusively to investors and prospective investors that are believed to satisfy applicable eligibility and suitability requirements. Each offering and sale of shares is exempt from registration under the Securities Act of 1933 as an offering to non-United States persons.

Managed Accounts

In the future, Marketfield may also provide investment advisory services to a limited number of managed accounts. In this event, it will generally receive an advisory fee based on a percentage of the assets under management. Fees for managed accounts will be negotiated on a case-by-case basis and are generally payable in arrears on a quarterly basis.

Brokerage and Other Fees

Brokerage firms typically charge transaction fees on purchases or sales of securities, and account custodians may charge custodial fees. These charges are usually small in relation to the value of the account. The selection of the security is more important than the fees that a brokerage firm charges to buy or sell the security. Additional information about transaction expenses is contained in the section of this brochure entitled "Brokerage Practices."

Types of Clients

Marketfield Fund and The Marketfield Fund, Ltd.

Marketfield Fund is a separate series of Trust for Professional Managers, an open-ended investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

Marketfield Fund is managed using a long-short strategy that focuses on macroeconomic analysis. The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. is a Cayman Islands exempted company managed using a strategy similar to that of Marketfield Fund. The objective of both funds is capital appreciation.

Minimum Investor Account Size

The minimum investment amounts for initial and subsequent subscriptions to each fund are set forth in the prospectus or the confidential private placement memorandum, as the case may be, relating to the fund. Marketfield reserves the right to increase or decrease the minimum investor account size that the funds accept. In general, Marketfield would require at least $20,000,000 in assets to establish a separately managed account.

Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies, and Risk of Loss

Investment Strategies

In addition to charting, fundamental, technical, and cyclical analysis, Marketfield utilize proprietary macroeconomic analysis to identify and evaluate securities that it believes to be attractive candidates for investment. Additional information about the investment strategies and methods used by the funds are set forth in the prospectus or offering memorandum relating to each fund.

Sources of Information

Marketfield uses information, reports, and data from various sources, but the investment decisions that Marketfield makes on behalf of its clients are based primarily on its own internal research and analysis, as well as the experience of its key personnel. Marketfield may obtain research information from third parties, including published reports of companies and other issuers, general economic data, and governmental publications and data compilations.

The main sources of information used by Marketfield include financial newspapers and magazines, inspections of corporate activities, research materials prepared by others, corporate rating services, annual reports, prospectuses, filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and company press releases.

Risk of Loss

All investment programs involve risks that are borne by the investor. The investment approach employed by Marketfield constantly keeps the risk of loss in mind. Information about the specific risk factors relevant to a fund is set forth in the prospectus or confidential private placement memorandum, as the case may be, relating to the fund. The Marketfield funds, and therefore indirectly the investors in the funds, face the following investment risks among others:

Dependence on Marketfield: The performance of each fund is critically dependent on the efforts of Michael C. Aronstein. Biographical information about Mr. Aronstein is included in the brochure supplement included at the end of this brochure. Mr. Aronstein devotes the time and effort that he deems necessary to supervision of the Marketfield funds, but he may have other business responsibilities. In addition, the past performance of Marketfield and Mr. Aronstein may not be indicative of future results.

Market Risk: The price of a security, bond, or mutual fund may drop in reaction to tangible and intangible events and conditions. This type of risk is caused by external factors regardless of the particular circumstances that affect a security. For example, political, economic, and social conditions may influence market conditions.

Interest-Rate Risk: Fluctuations in interest rates may cause investment prices to fluctuate. For example, when interest rates rise, fixed-rate bond coupons tend to become less attractive, which in turn causes bond market values to decline.

Inflation Risk: When inflation is present, a dollar today will not buy as much as a dollar next year, because the purchasing power of the dollar is eroding at the rate of inflation.

Currency Risk: A security that is not denominated in United States dollars is subject to fluctuations in the value of the United States dollar as against the currency in which the security is denominated. For example, the value of a security denominated in euros will decrease if the dollar strengthens against the euro. This type of risk is also called exchange-rate risk.

Reinvestment Risk: This risk is that future proceeds from investments may be reinvested at a lower rate of return because yields generally have decreased. This type of risk primarily relates to fixed-income securities.

Business Risk: This risk is associated with a particular industry or a particular issuer. For example, an oil production company depends upon the lengthy process of finding, transporting, and then selling oil before the company generates a profit. As a result, an oil production company carries a higher risk of profitability variance than an electric company, which generates its income from a relatively stable customer base that purchase electricity regardless of the economic environment.

Liquidity Risk: Liquidity is the ready ability to convert an investment into cash. Generally, assets are more liquid if many traders are interested in a standardized product. For example, United States Department of Treasury obligations are highly liquid, while real estate properties are not. Only investors who are financially able to maintain their investment without a need for immediate liquidity should consider an investment with Marketfield.

Financial Risk: Excessive borrowing to finance the operations of a business increases the risk of profitability, because the company is required to repay principal and interest in both good and bad economic times. During periods of financial stress, the inability of a company to meet its loan obligations may decrease the value of its securities and, in some cases, force the company to seek bankruptcy protection.

Risks of Issuer-Specific Changes: Changes in the financial condition of an issuer or counterparty, changes in specific economic or political conditions that affect a particular type of security or issuer, and changes in general economic or political conditions may increase the risk of default by an issuer or counterparty, which may affect the value of a security or an instrument. The value of securities of smaller, less well-known issuers may be more volatile than the value of securities of larger issuers. Smaller issuers may have more limited product lines, markets, or financial resources.

Hedging Risk: There can be no assurance that a particular hedge is appropriate or that risk is measured properly. Further, while Marketfield may enter into hedging transactions to seek to reduce risk, these transactions may result in poorer overall performance and increased (rather than reduced) risk for a fund than if Marketfield did not engage in hedging transactions.

Arbitrage-Transactions Risk: If the requisite elements of an arbitrage strategy are not properly analyzed, or if unexpected events or price movements intervene, losses may occur. These losses may be magnified to the extent that Marketfield is employing leverage in a fund. Moreover, arbitrage strategies often depend upon identifying favorable spreads. Favorable spreads may be identified, reduced, or eliminated by other market participants.

Commodities Risk: Commodity investments are affected by business, financial market, and legal uncertainties. There can be no assurance that Marketfield will correctly evaluate the nature and magnitude of the various factors that could affect the value of and return on commodity investments. Prices of commodity investments may be volatile, and a variety of factors that are inherently difficult to predict, such as domestic or international economic and political developments, may significantly affect the portfolio investment results of a fund. In addition, the value of a fund may fluctuate as the general level of interest rates fluctuates.

Relative-Value Risk: In the event that the perceived pricing misalignments that underlie the relative-value trading positions that Marketfield places in a fund were to fail to converge toward, or were to diverge further from, the relative values that Marketfield expects, a fund may incur a loss.

Distressed-Situation Risk: Investment in distressed-situation securities exposes a fund to significant risks, including (1) the difficulty in obtaining information as to the true condition of the issuer, (2) regulatory risk, including the laws relating to fraudulent conveyances, voidable preferences, lender liability, and bankruptcy, (3) litigation risk, (4) liquidity risk, and (5) collection risk, especially in the context of sovereign debt. Moreover, to the extent that a fund invests in sovereign-debt obligations, those obligations are subject to additional risks and considerations that are not present in private distressed-situation securities, including the uncertainties involved in enforcing and collecting debt obligations against sovereign nations. These uncertainties may be additionally affected by world events, changes in United States foreign policy and other factors outside of the control of Marketfield.

Emerging-Markets Risk: The risks of foreign investments typically are greater in emerging markets. For example, political and economic structures in less-developed countries may be less established and may change rapidly. These countries also are more likely to experience high levels of inflation, deflation, or currency devaluation, which may harm their economies and securities markets and may increase volatility. Restrictions on currency trading that may be imposed in emerging markets will have an adverse effect on the value of the securities of companies that trade or operate in those countries.

Derivatives Risk: Swaps, options traded over the counter, and other customized derivative or synthetic instruments are subject to the risk of nonperformance by the counterparty of the instrument, including risks relating to the financial soundness and creditworthiness of the counterparty. In addition, investments in derivative instruments may involve a high degree of leverage, meaning that the overall contract value (and, accordingly, the potential for profits or losses in that value) may be much greater than the modest deposit used to buy the position in the derivative contract. Derivative securities may also be highly volatile. The prices of derivative instruments and the investments underlying derivative instruments may fluctuate rapidly and over wide ranges and may reflect unforeseeable events or changes in conditions, none of which can be controlled by Marketfield. Further, many transactions in derivative instruments are not undertaken on recognized securities exchanges and thus expose a fund to greater risks than regulated exchange transactions. Exchange transactions generally provide greater liquidity and more accurate valuation of securities.

Illiquid-Investments Risk: Some securities and instruments may have no readily available market or independent pricing. Reduced liquidity may have an adverse impact on market prices and the ability of Marketfield to sell particular securities when necessary to meet liquidity needs or in response to a specific economic event, such as the deterioration of creditworthiness of an issuer. Reduced liquidity in the secondary market for certain securities may also make it more difficult for Marketfield to obtain market quotations based on actual trades for the purpose of valuing the portfolio of a fund.

The foregoing discussion does not purport to be a complete enumeration or explanation of all of the risks involved in an investment in a Marketfield fund. Potential investors should read the entire prospectus or the entire private placement memorandum, as the case may be, and they should consult with their own advisors to determine whether to invest in a Marketfield fund.

Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions, and Personal Trading

Code of Ethics

The personnel of Marketfield have committed to a written code of ethics. This code of ethics requires Marketfield and its personnel to comply fully with all applicable laws, including federal securities laws, in conducting investment advisory services and related activities. The chief compliance officer of Marketfield is responsible for overseeing adherence to the code of ethics. Marketfield will provide a copy of the code of ethics to any client or prospective client upon request.

The code of ethics is based on the principle that Marketfield has a fiduciary obligation to its clients. In this fiduciary capacity, Marketfield and its personnel are required to place the interests of its clients before their own interests and the interests of persons and entities that may be related to them. Marketfield seeks to avoid conflicts of interest with its clients and will take appropriate steps consistent with its code of ethics to resolve any conflicts of interest that may arise.

The Marketfield code of ethics and other compliance procedures establish policies and procedures in a number of areas, including the treatment of confidential proprietary information, recordkeeping, conflicts of interest, and personal securities transactions.

Violations of Law

The chief compliance officer conducts compliance reviews at least annually and monitors for indications of potential violations of the code of ethics on a monthly basis. In addition, Marketfield has a written policy that requires personnel who become aware of a violation of the code of ethics to report the possible violation promptly on a confidential basis to the chief compliance officer. The code of ethics requires Marketfield to investigate these reports and prohibits adverse action from being taken against someone who reports a possible violation in good faith.

The code of ethics requires Marketfield to administer discipline to maintain the quality of services that it provides to clients by encouraging legal and appropriate behavior and by deterring illegal and inappropriate behavior. Disciplinary actions may include a written warning, fines, suspension of employment, and termination of employment.

Participation or Interest in Client Transactions

Marketfield or one or more of its officers, members, managers, employees, and agents may from time to time have a direct or indirect interest in a security that is purchased, sold, or otherwise traded in client accounts and may effect transactions in the security for client accounts that may be the same as or different from the actions that Marketfield or such a related person may take with respect to its or his account.

As an agent for a fund, Marketfield has the authority to effect transactions in securities while also acting as agent for another Marketfield client that is the counterparty to the transaction. It is Marketfield policy to conduct cross-transactions of this nature on the open market.

Personal Trading

Marketfield permits its personnel to purchase and sell securities for their personal accounts and for the accounts of persons and entities related to them, so long as they are in compliance with the code of ethics. These securities may be among those purchased or sold by Marketfield funds.

The Marketfield code of ethics requires that personnel obtain clearance in advance from the chief compliance officer with respect to all proposed securities trading for their personal accounts and for the accounts of related persons, including securities offered in an initial public offering or another limited offering. The code of ethics also requires personnel to disclose to the chief compliance officer all of their reportable personal securities holdings, to provide the chief compliance officer with quarterly holdings and transaction reports, and to alert the chief compliance officer to any changes in their holdings. In addition, Marketfield has a written insider trading policy that is designed to prevent the improper use of material nonpublic information.

Brokerage Practices

Selecting Brokerage Firms

Marketfield generally has full discretion and authority over its client accounts, including the authority to select a broker-dealer to execute a particular transaction and to negotiate the rate of commission payable for these services. In selecting a broker-dealer, Marketfield seeks the best available combination of execution and overall price, which includes the cost of the transaction. Marketfield may utilize broker-dealers that provide solely brokerage services, as well as broker-dealers that provide research or investment-management related services and equipment, such as research reports on particular industries and companies, economic surveys and analyses, recommendations as to specific securities, online quotations, news and research services, and other services. Some funds have established prime brokerage arrangements, which permit transactions executed through several broker-dealers to settle into an account at the prime broker.

Marketfield does not consider whether it or a related person will receive referrals from a broker-dealer or another third party when it selects broker-dealers.

Best Execution

Marketfield endeavors to select financially responsible broker-dealers that provide best execution, and it tests best execution on each trading day. To the extent that a broker-dealer provides Marketfield with non-proprietary research or other services, Marketfield makes a good-faith determination that the value of the research or other services is reasonable in light of the commission charged.

Marketfield may have investors in its funds that also provide services to us, including broker-dealers or individuals or entities affiliated with broker-dealers. Relationships such as these may be viewed as creating a conflict of interest. Marketfield is not prohibited from engaging in any business activities with investors who are broker-dealers or affiliates of broker-dealers. Subject at all times to the principle of best execution, from time to time Marketfield may execute trades through broker-dealers that are fund investors or that have affiliates that are fund investors.

Trade Error Policy

On occasion, Marketfield may experience errors with respect to trades made on behalf of client accounts. Marketfield endeavors to detect trade errors prior to settlement and to correct them in an expeditious manner. Marketfield will reimburse client accounts for losses directly due to uncorrected trade errors attributable to Marketfield personnel.

Research

From time to time, Marketfield may receive proprietary research prepared by a broker-dealer and other products and services as a result of executing securities transactions through the broker-dealer. In addition, a broker-dealer also pay for research, products, and services provided by third parties that Marketfield receives as a result of its relationship with the broker-dealer. Marketfield benefits from receiving proprietary and third-party research, products, and services because it is not then required to produce or pay for the research, products, and services provided. Under these circumstances, Marketfield has an incentive to select or recommend a broker-dealer based on its interest in receiving the research or other products and services, rather than strictly on the interest of its clients in receiving the most favorable execution. Marketfield may use the research, products, and services that it receives from broker-dealers to manage assets for all clients, not only those clients that paid for the benefits. Marketfield is in a position to direct brokerage to those broker-dealers that provide Marketfield with research, products, and services because it has complete discretion in the selection of broker-dealers.

Order Aggregation

Marketfield generally aggregates for block execution orders for the purchase and sale of the same security on behalf of Marketfield Fund and The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. Securities purchased in an aggregated order receive the average price obtained on the order.

Review of Accounts

Periodic Reviews

The books and records pertaining to Marketfield Fund and The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. are maintained by U.S. Bancorp Fund Services, LLC, which serves as third-party administrator and transfer agent. The administrator produces regular reports to the investors in the funds. In addition, an independent certified public accounting firm conducts an annual audit of the records and accounts of the funds. Audited financial statements for the funds are distributed to investors within a reasonable time after they are received.

At least monthly, Mr. Aronstein conducts a detailed review of the portfolio holdings of Marketfield Fund and The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. to align the holdings with the investment strategy. Managed account clients will receive regular reports as to the holdings and transactions in their accounts directly from the account custodian.

Additional Review Triggers

Client inquiries, changes in the general market outlook, changes in the tax laws, new investment information, and changes in the opinions of Mr. Aronstein on specific issues may prompt more frequent reviews of the portfolio holdings of some or all Marketfield funds.

Commentary and Other Reports

Marketfield Fund and The Marketfield Fund, Ltd. prepare a monthly written fund update, which includes commentary that discusses market conditions and the investment outlook. The administrator prepares a series of regular daily, monthly, and quarterly reports that Marketfield uses to manage the funds.

Client Referrals and Other Compensation

Incoming Referrals

Marketfield has written compensation arrangements with several unaffiliated parties for the referral of prospective clients. Clients generally bear no additional costs or expenses as a result of these arrangements.

Referrals Out

Marketfield does not accept referral fees or any form of remuneration from other professionals when a prospective investor is referred by Marketfield.

Custody

Account Statements

All client funds and securities are held at qualified custodians. These custodians provide account statements at least quarterly. The account statements are sent directly to Marketfield and the fund administrator. The fund administrator prepares and distributes account statements to fund investors.

Investment Discretion

Discretionary Authority for Trading

Marketfield has the authority to determine, without obtaining specific consent from a fund, the securities to be bought or sold and the amount of the securities to be bought or sold for the fund. Discretionary trading authority facilitates placing trades in fund accounts so that Marketfield may promptly implement the investment strategy of each fund. Marketfield does not receive any portion of the transaction fees or commissions paid by a client fund to the custodian or executing broker-dealer, although Marketfield may receive research, products, and services as discussed in the section of this brochure entitled “Brokerage Practices.”

Limited Power of Attorney

The funds grant Marketfield a limited power of attorney, which is a trading authorization that gives Marketfield discretionary authority over fund accounts.

Voting Client Securities

Proxy Voting

Marketfield has adopted written proxy-voting policies and procedures. Client funds, including Marketfield Fund, grant Marketfield the exclusive right to vote proxies on their behalf. Marketfield is permitted to delegate the responsibility to vote proxies to a proxy-voting service provider. Marketfield proxy-voting procedures are available upon request by any fund investor or prospective investor. Also available upon request by any investor or prospective investor is a record of how Marketfield has voted client proxies.

Conflicts of Interest

It is unlikely that a conflict of interest will arise in the context of voting proxies. If a matter to be voted upon involves a potential conflict of interest, Mr. Aronstein consults with the chief compliance officer to evaluate the conflict presented. Marketfield then either votes the proxy in accordance with the action recommended or abstains from voting.

Financial Information

Financial Condition

Marketfield has no financial impairment to report in this brochure.

Brochure Supplement

Education and Business Standards

Marketfield considers relevant business experience to be one of the most important criteria in selecting persons to provide investment advice to and research for its clients. Marketfield does not have specific hiring guidelines but generally requires at least a college degree. Marketfield seeks to hire personnel with educational and professional backgrounds that are compatible with the functions that the personnel are hired to perform. Absent suitable business experience, Marketfield generally seeks to entrust investment advisory and research responsibilities to personnel with academic backgrounds, including advanced training, that indicate that the personnel have the skills and intelligence necessary to perform their assigned functions.

He continues to be involved with several family-owned investment related businesses that are not managed by or affiliated with Marketfield.

In January 2007, without adjudication of any law or fact and without admitting or denying any allegation or finding, Mr. Gillespie stipulated to a finding of a violation of New York Stock Exchange rule 342 (failure to supervise). Mr. Gillespie was censured and fined $125,000, which was paid by the parent company of his employer. He received a plenary bar, which is now expired, and is not permitted to act as a specialist or to be employed on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. Prior to hiring Mr. Gillespie in July 2007, Marketfield management thoroughly investigated this matter. Marketfield believes that the matter would have been found to be without merit had it been adjudicated.

Mr. Gillespie has no supervisory responsibilities at Marketfield of the type that New York Stock Exchange rule 342 is meant to address. In addition, Mr. Gillespie does not have a controlling influence over the management or policies of Marketfield, and he does not determine the general investment advice given to any Marketfield client. Because Mr. Gillespie is consequently not a management person of Marketfield for purposes of Form ADV, the event described above is not discussed in the section of this brochure entitled "Disciplinary Information."
