Methods of Analysis & Investment Strategies

A. Methods of Analysis and Investment Strategies

We use several different techniques for evaluating investments:

- Fundamental Analysis
- Charting Analysis
- Historical Analysis

Fundamental Analysis

Fundamental Analysis involves using research to predict stock value that focuses on such determinants as earnings and dividends prospects, expectations for future interest rates, and risk evaluation of the company. Fundamental Analysis is our primary means for evaluating different types of securities.

Charting Analysis

Charting Analysis involves the use of charts to determine patterns in price performance. Charting Analysis can help determine favorable purchasing and selling opportunities.

Historical Analysis

Historical Analysis can be used to evaluate a company's track record of sales, profits and dividend payments.

B. Material Risks Involved

We generally take a long-term investment approach to investing client assets. We do not employ short-term trading or market-timing strategies as, in our opinion, those types of strategies are not productive and generate excessive trading costs.

Please keep in mind that investing in securities involves a risk of loss that you, as a client, should be prepared to realize. Additionally, past performance of securities is no indication of future performance. There are many risks inherent to investment, including, but not limited to, market risk, business risk, interest rate risk, foreign currency risk, and legislative risk.

C. Risks of Specific Securities Utilized

The securities we recommend do not involve significant risk beyond that of the general domestic and/or international equity and bond markets.
