Hughes Capital Management, Inc. (HCM) was founded in August 1993 by Frankie D. Hughes, President and Chief Investment Officer of the firm. Ms. Hughes owns 100% of HCM. She has over 30 years of fixed income experience, including 19 years as a fixed income portfolio manager. Prior to establishing HCM, Ms. Hughes was Director of the Asset Management Division, Portfolio Manager and Member of the Investment Policy Committee at WR Lazard & Co. While at WR Lazard & Co., she developed the structured fixed income product that is still in use today at HCM.

Since registering as an investment advisor with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in 1993, HCM has been dedicated exclusively to providing fixed income portfolio management to private and public sector funds, focusing on tax-exempt portfolios for state and local governments, Taft-Hartley plans, corporations and philanthropic institutions. As of December 31, 2013, HCM manages $1,001,352,000 in assets on a discretionary basis.

As a structured fixed income asset manager, HCM offers a range of strategies based upon one fundamental conceptual framework. These strategies are duration neutral and add value by sector emphasis and security selection.

Item 8 – Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

Overview of Hughes Capital Management's (HCM) Investment Process: Utilizing fundamental analysis and an assessment of relative value within the context of current market conditions, future movements in interest rates, shifts in the shape of the yield curve as well as sector spread changes are forecasted to derive our portfolio strategies. In order to formulate these strategies, a wide array of factors are considered, including: economic conditions, inflation, Federal Reserve policy, non-Treasury securities' spread levels, supply/demand factors, yield curve structure, equity markets, dollar valuation, commodity prices, foreign economies and markets, government regulation and policies, and international conflicts.

Although a considerable amount of time is allocated to formulating our duration and yield curve strategies, we spend significantly more time analyzing and evaluating corporate credits and structured securities as well as determining relative values between sectors. For individual securities, within the corporate sector, we assess the credit quality of a company through the application of a rigorous seven factor evaluation. In addition, considerable attention is paid to ascertaining the catalysts which will ultimately drive a change in the credit quality of a firm.

Similarly, our process of analyzing structured securities is extremely thorough. We evaluate a security's projected future cash flows through the use of stress tests and horizon return analyses. In addition, we analyze the structural support of a security by examining the imbedded credit enhancement features as well as assessing the quality of the underlying collateral.

Overlaying our credit and security structure analyses is our relative value analysis. Its objective is to determine which securities currently have value, relative to others at current market levels. We make option-adjusted yield spread comparisons between securities, taking into account differences in credit quality and structure. Breakeven analyses are also performed to determine the extent to which a security's spread can widen and still outperform Treasuries. Finally, projections are made as to the future direction of a security's yield spread and an evaluation of the security's downside risk is performed.

For more information regarding HCM's investment strategies, please contact Hughes Capital Management, Inc. at (703)684-7222 or info@hughescm.com.

Investing in securities involves risk of loss that clients should be prepared to bear. The principal risks, which could adversely affect a fixed income portfolio's asset value, yield and total return, are:

Interest Rate Risk: the risk that fixed income securities will decline in value because of an increase in interest rates; a portfolio with a longer average duration will be more sensitive to changes in interest rates than a portfolio with a shorter average duration.

Cash Withdrawals Risk: the portfolio manager may need to sell the portfolio's holdings in order to meet clients' cash withdrawal requests. The portfolio could experience a loss when selling securities to meet these requests if the requests are unusually large or frequent, occur in times of overall market turmoil or declining prices for the securities sold, or when the securities the portfolio manager wishes to, or is required to, sell are illiquid.

Credit Risk: the risk that the portfolio could lose money if the issuer or guarantor of a fixed income security is unable or unwilling to meet its financial obligations.

Market Risk: the risk that the value of securities owned by the portfolio may go up or down, sometimes rapidly or unpredictably, due to factors affecting securities markets generally or particular industries.

Issuer Risk: the risk that the value of a security may decline for reasons directly related to the issuer, such as management performance, financial leverage and reduced demand for the issuer's goods or services.

Liquidity Risk: the risk that a particular investment may be difficult to sell and that the portfolio may be unable to sell illiquid securities at an advantageous time or price or achieve its desired level of exposure to a certain sector.

Mortgage-Related and Other Asset-Backed Risk: the risks of investing in mortgage-related and other asset-backed securities include interest rate risk, extension risk and prepayment risk. When mortgages and other obligations are prepaid and when securities are called, the portfolio manager may have to reinvest in securities with a lower yield or fail to recover additional amounts (i.e., premiums) paid for securities with higher interest rates, resulting in an unexpected capital loss and/or a decrease in the total return.

Management Risk: the risk that the investment strategy process and risk analyses applied by HCM will produce the desired results and that legislative or regulatory developments may affect the investment techniques available to HCM and the individual portfolio manager in connection with managing the portfolio. There is no guarantee that the investment objective of the portfolio will be achieved.
